Next on The Journal: Haliburton's debate on Lord's Prayer will get national coverage

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

A LOCAL ISSUE will be getting national television coverage after a crew from CBC's The Journal spent a few days in the area interviewing people about the Lord's Prayer controversy.

"It's something we have all considered—Canadian culture and how it's changing," says producer Jim Williamson of the debate centring on the whether tradition—the saying of the prayer during opening exercises in schools—is being lost in the translation of one of Canada's other traditions, multiculturalism—acceptance of and abeyance to all cultures.

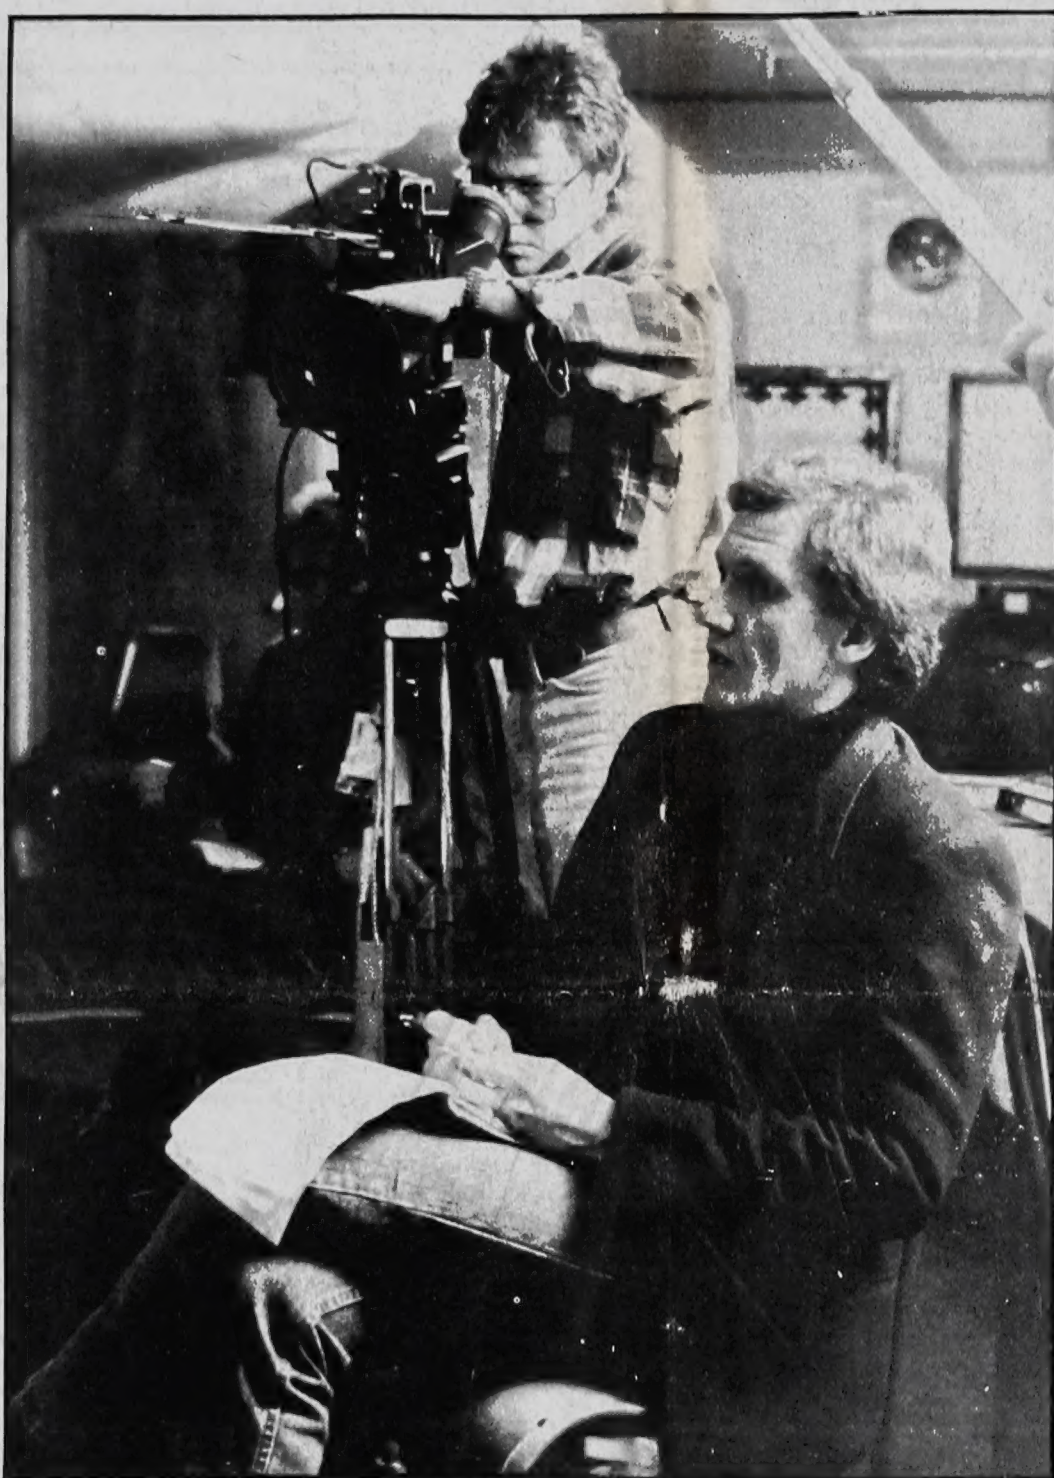

"People across the country can really identify with what's happening here," adds reporter, Eric Rankin. "This issue is important in other provinces too."

But only in Haliburton County has the issue been brought to the point where someone's job was at stake. A few weeks ago, the board of education agreed with Wilberforce principal, Charles Hughes', suggestion that he be demoted rather than fired over his refusal to stop saying the prayer in his class. While the trustees agreed that the prayer is an important part of the school day, they felt Mr. Hughes was not justified in breaking board policy which replaced the prayer with a minute's silence, and therefore setting a bad example for the children.

The Journal found out about the local dilemma through two stories in The Globe and Mail: A front page story about the demotion on March 4; and a news feature written by this reporter in the March 6 edition. The latter story outlined the debate which has been raging through the Letters to the Editor in The Echo.

First to be interviewed was Echo editor and publisher, Len Pizze, who had opened the floodgates with his column in favour of the Ontario Court of Appeals ruling that exclusive use of the County battles hard to hold budget line

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

It could have been worse, the chairman of the county's board of management said as he announced a 7.4 per cent increase in this year's budget.

"Nearly all department requests were trimmed," said Dysart Reeve Murray Fearrey, noting that if they hadn't have been, the increase—primarily borne by the municipalities—could have reached 22 per cent.

"This is a lot sweeter pill than you'll get from (federal finance minister Michael) Wilson and (Ontario treasurer Robert) Nixon."

The province demands more services but doesn't offer more money

The trick with striking a fair budget, Fearrey told his fellow county councillors last Wednesday, is to keep taxpayers in mind without stifling some of the plans which will make the county continue to grow.

On top of this, the county must implement the policies set out by the province—such as the $30,000 set aside for the pay equity program—without expecting the province to provide any extra funds to do so. In fact, this is the first year the government has put a hold on the general support and resource equalization grants, which are the same as last year: $95,549 and $174,293.

And while land division fees put $76,131 into the county's coffers last year, the management committee believes the pace of real estate development will level off this year, and has planned for $65,000 in revenues. Other supplementary taxes are also expected to fall to $8,000 from $16,540.

Other revenue, apart from the levies charged against municipalities, is projected at $33,900.

But the list of expenditures is much longer.

Because of an increase in fees paid to council councillors, this year's budget allocates $13,000 for these fees, up $3,300. Now instead of getting $40 for each meeting attended, except county council, the 17 representatives will get $50. For each county council meeting they will get a $25 increase to $100. They also get a 25 cents a kilometre mileage allowance, expected to total $6,350. Land Division Committee fees have also been increased and are expected to come in at $5,600.

Clerk treasurer, Gary McKnight, also got a raise this year. He is now

Downpour floods stores, houses

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

It didn't rain last Tuesday night, it poured. And poured and poured. But when you have a thunderstorm in the middle of winter, the frost doesn't allow the rain to soak into the ground and it must search out new escapes. These were found in several downtown businesses, the Legion, and countless number of homes.

The Legion was perhaps the hardest hit by the flooding. With a thick layer of ice built up on the parking lot, the doorway leading into the Mountbatten Room was lower and provided easy access into the building.

"At one spot, it was two inches deep," says manager Jim Tice. Luckily, at 11 o'clock people in the Mountbatten Room noticed that water was seeping through and action to stop it began immediately. Ray Scott and his bulldozer were called in to break up the ice and level off the parking lot, while inside, everyone started moving the furniture out of the mini-flood's way.

"Everyone who was here just pitched right in," says Tice. Ten people worked for two and a half hours, including George Logan with his wet vacuum, a machine put to much use in 24 hours. The next morning, the rugs in two rooms were shampooed so Tice doesn't expect there will be any permanent damage.

Bill and Freda Davis think they lost between $1,000 and $1,500 worth of carpet after rain water flooded their Colour Your World, Carpet Division store in the Stedman's Mall.

"We're lucky actually," says Bill Davis, who was expecting an order of eight carpets to join the three which were soaked on the floor. "No matter how bad things are, they

MNR cuts a hot issue with fire chiefs

Due to personnel cut-backs, the Ministry of Natural Resources has requested that volunteer firefighters from the municipalities spend more time fighting forest fires. But local reaction to the request is mixed.

"We don't want to do it," says Monmouth fire chief Max Walsh.

Caution key to position search

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

After having three men sit in the administrator's chair in three years, the residents of Hyland Crest need to be given a breathing space before a new administrator is chosen, says the chairman of the home's committee of management.

"At this time, there's no need to jump too quickly," Bill Howe told his fellow county councillors last Wednesday. "We'll take a breathing stretch so we can be really sure we have the right person."

"The bottom line is the wellbeing of these people, regardless." Earlier this month, Dwight Morley tendered his resignation from the job he has held for less than a year. He replaced Karl Samuelson who immediately upon receiving the post, applied for jobs elsewhere. However, before Samuelson arrived at the home, Sid Brown had been

"We've got to go buy more equipment. And I think it would be the end of most volunteer fire departments because some of us just can't afford the time. There's just no way in the world those people can afford to leave their jobs — a contractor could be losing out up to $500."

The MNR's change involves reducing 171 five-man crews across the province to 207 three-man crews

— a reduction of 25 per cent, says Tom Russell, operations manager for the Haliburton office. But the manpower in this area will be cut 46 per cent, he adds. Cost efficiency is the reason for the cuts.

"We've had a reduction, there's no doubt there will be an increase of reliance on municipal volunteers to do more work," says Russell. "They will be called to spend more time away from their jobs working on putting out fires. But we will still be there, we will still support them. We'll make it work."

But Walsh doesn't think it will be so easy. Volunteer firefighters are reimbursed partially for missed wages, but Walsh says many can't afford to leave their jobs for the amount of money they get. So, he says, less people will be volunteering, and some may even quit.

Keith Tallman, Haliburton County Warden, agrees.

"It's certain we're going to have trouble with our volunteers," Tallman says. "Basically, some have said they won't respond to the fires."

Russell understands that this may cause some problems. He met with area fire chiefs at a meeting last week, and says that the departments will have to "change their style of

'Journal' probes attitudes to Lord's Prayer decision

Lord's Prayer does not reflect the province's multicultural makeup. With a crew of four jammed into his office, he explained why he first applauded the ruling and then accepted that local sentiment might be reason enough to keep the prayer.

Board chairman Wendy Ladurantaye has had her fair share of interviews in the past week, but last week, her children got in on the picture too. Talkative and full of opinions before the camera was turned on, the younger Ladurantayes suddenly became shy when they knew their answers might be heard across the country.

'We hope everyone will feel fairly represented. The best we can do is present both sides of the issue'

The children of Caroline Bishop and of Lon Duncombe were also included in separate interviews with these proponents of the pro-Appeals Court side of the issue. Thora Fideau gave her reasons for voicing her concerns to the board over Mr. Hughes' teaching in principle that "if you don't like a law, you can break it."

Mr. Hughes was visited in his home during the March break to hear why he felt he could not go along with the board's policy to replace the prayer with a minute's silence. He was also questioned on the role religion has to play in the schools, a side issue no one wants to spend too much time on in case it detracts from the Lord's Prayer controversy.

Wednesday—the day following the thunderstorm so don't expect many picturesque shots of the village—cameraman Hans Vanderzande and sound technician Al Edwards withstood the drizzle to take street shots to use as filler images during the commentary. The Echo office was once again visited for pictures of the paper being stuffed with flyers.

And on Wednesday night, where else but in the basement of the United Church, the pro-prayer people gathered to voice many of the opinions they first gave vent to in letters to the editor. Rick and Nada Vaughan, Lindsay Roberts, Rev. Jim and Beth Fast, Roberta Walsh and Don Waterhouse now know what happens when you speak out in The Echo.

"They were very good at making you feel comfortable," Mrs. Vaughan said after she was able to get over her initial nervousness. "It went really well and they said they were pleased with the answers."

Finally, postponed a week because of the March Break, the crew made its way to the Wilberforce Public School, the eye of the storm. Under the glare of television lights, a microcosm of Canadian culture was videoed.

All in all, approximately eight hours of tape time have been spent in the county. Now Messrs. Williamson and Rankin must return to the city to boil that down to a seven-minute feature which will be shown in the next week or so.

"People have been very co-operative and given us a lot of their time," Mr. Rankin says as the pro-prayer people consolidate their arguments upstairs. "We hope everyone will feel fairly represented. The best we can do is present both sides of this issue."

"What you can hope to do is stimulate discussion," adds Mr. Williamson, agreeing with Mr. Rankin that The Journal has a reputation of being reliable, and therefore people shouldn't be worried about a slanted view of the story.

Despite the issue being such a broad one, the two have found it easier to deal strictly with how Haliburton County has reacted to it.

"It's a very caring community, with not a lot of the extremes of convictions" you can find in larger centres. Here, conversations have flowed easily because "people are fairly certain about how they feel and it's something they want to talk about... If people don't like things in the city, they picket."

"It's a fascinating issue and it's nice to have a feature contained within the community."

In this age of home VCRs and video cameras, not many of the people interviewed have been overly "mystified" by the myriad of lights and equipment, they say. Nervous, yes; overwhelmed, no.

Most, however, are surprised by how much time it takes to conduct an interview. Technical considerations come first in deciding where interviews will take place and while Messrs. Vanderzande and Edwards worried about light feet and "Testing, one, two, three...", the producer and interviewer consult on what questions would be asked and the tone of the discussion. This takes at least half an hour, and out of an interview which could last 45 minutes, perhaps only a few quotes will be used once they start editing.

"The hardest part is going through the material—it's very time consuming," says Mr. Williamson of the editing task ahead. But once in the phase of cutting and snipping, they want the story to take on its own shape. That's why they have to make sure they've covered as many angles as possible while in the community. "You don't want to go in with the decision that this angle is how you're doing the story."

"You try to ask a lot of different questions and once you've digested it all," adds Mr. Rankin, you have a much better idea of where the story should go.

For the people on the opposite end of the camera, what will be fascinating is how the little-story-that-grew will take what has been a very personal stance and turn it into an argument being heard across the country.

This is what happens when you write letters to the editor:

HCSA gets use of rail line

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

The Haliburton County Snowmobile Association has been granted property permission for those parts of its trails which run along the abandoned railway corridor.

"What they're entitled to is what they groom," explains clerk-treasurer, Gary McKnight of the arrangement.

Under the deal, the HCSA will spend more money on signage and policing any infractions because it now has the authority to enforce those rules. As well, should any accident occur, the association's insurance will cover any costs.

While people riding snowmobiles on the corridor will have to have an HCSA permit, McKnight says other users of the corridor—dog mushers, cross country skiers and pedestrians—will be allowed free access. The land permission is from October to April so the HCSA has no jurisdiction during the summer months.

Who is responsible for structural changes to the trail, such as bridge improvement, "remains to be seen," McKnight says and county council has budgeted $10,000 for corridor development this year.

In a letter to county council, the president of the HCSA voiced his organization's pleasure at "the spirit of co-operation" such an agreement displays.

"As you are aware, we as volunteers put in many hundreds of hours working to improve the image and facilities in the county," writes Peter Overington. "Occasionally we all reach the point where we consider if it is all worth the effort. However, when we get the type of support from local government which you have provided, we know that we are not alone in our efforts."

Wet work in storm's wake

can always be worse."

The damaged carpets have been given away and insurance won't pay for their cost because the storm is considered an act of God. Once again, flooding was caused by ice buildup in the parking lot.

"Help!," Pat Clarkson and Val Burch yelled when they arrived to work at the Canada Employment Centre on Wednesday morning. In the small anteroom between doors, water was an inch deep, and the rain had soaked the carpets halfway through the main office. Because all the furniture had to be moved so the wet vac could once again do its job, the women say "we did a lot of heavy work but not paperwork" that day.

A few doors down, Sylvia Holland had water blisters bulging through the paint of the Village Shoppe. Where the old building joined with the new addition, water was dripping out of the walls and from the ceiling. Buckets were strategically placed to catch the water, but nothing could be done to stop the damage to the walls. The water eventually ran down the staircase leading to Melissa Stephens' music studio.

"My husband Doug called me at quarter to eight and said 'You should see the store,'" says Mrs. Holland. Mr. Holland spent the entire day pumping up the water and before he continues with more renovations to the store, must now repair the blemishes.

Across the street at the Easton Mall, it didn't help that the drain on the upstairs sidewalk was placed at least an inch higher than the entranceway to Herb Debes' The Hairstylist. And when the rain fell, the big pile of snow sitting next to the drain didn't do much good either.

"It was the driving rain that did it," says Debes, the day after he arrived at his salon to find water creeping across the width of the store. "We all had shocks yesterday."

But Debes has words of praise for Scott Burke, who "worked like a fiend" cleaning up the mess. (Building owner Mike Easton was away on holidays.) "He just took right over and for a young guy, that was good—excellent."

From the floor of The Hairstylist, the rain made its way into Country Rose and Shrub and Perfect Prints.

"This is not going to be a good day," Brenda Petrow thought to herself as she walked into her flower shop on Wednesday. Besides spending the entire day rearranging all of her displays so the carpet could be wet vacuumed, she had to replace 15 ceiling tiles. As well, when one tile crumbled to the ground ("killing" a couple of plants in the process), she noticed that she should also buy an extra bale of insulation for the ceiling.

"It could have been worse," she says, although after her husband didn't get home from cleaning up the Legion until three in the morning, it was bad enough thinking what the worse might have been.

A lot of expensive machinery was undamaged next door at Perfect Prints. The water came pouring down the adjoining wall, passing over the fuse box, plug for the small fridge and heater before it soaked into the carpet.

No one can estimate how many homes were affected by the storm. Snow and ice on roofs melted, sending water through any crack and crevice available. Emmerson's Rent All had rented out its three large wet vacuums and five pumps by ten o'clock Wednesday morning, and there were at least 35 people on the waiting list after that.

Jim Elstone, the local weather watcher, says 2.4 centimetres (one inch) of rain fell within hours. But that doesn't mean all the snow is gone for all the March Break tourists: On Friday afternoon and evening, he says, 30 centimetres (12 inches) of snow fell operation, a bit.

Municipalities balk at cost, demands of forest protection

"The impression I got was that there are no doubts it may affect the number of people who want to be involved with the volunteer fire departments," he says. "When the buzzer goes and you only have five firemen, and three of them are out of the county, that definitely limits your capabilities."

Most agree that our fire departments aren't ready yet to take on where the ministry is leaving off.

"In the past, we didn't respond to forest fires unless a building was endangered," says Tallman. "That was the responsibility of the ministry. But now, they just don't have the bodies to send out. And if we're fighting one of their fires, that could run into several hundred dollars. I don't think it's a satisfactory arrangement."

Still, according to legislation established in the 1950s, forest fires are the responsibility of the municipalities. And Minden fire chief Don Booth says that, although there will be a delay, the municipalities and volunteers will eventually be able to handle their extra responsibilities.

"I think that the job will get done one way or another, but whether it will be a suitable job is another question," he points out. "I think we have to do it. To just say we're not going to help would cause more problems than we have now."

"But it's a hard thing for the volunteer departments to handle. It's difficult to expect that much from them when that's not what they're designed for."

Russell says the volunteers will need more training in putting out brush fires. And he agrees that a major problem is the cost of new specialized equipment needed for fighting forest fires.

"In order for the municipalities to become more professional, they will, over time, have to get equipment more suitable for forest fires. Right now they only have proper equipment for structural fires."

But the provincial government will provide no funding for the cost of new equipment. And most agree it will be difficult to raise the money.

"They sent a list of equipment we'll need, saying it would cost about $10,000," says the Monmouth fire chief. "That's over a third of my budget, so I don't think that will work. The townships can't afford it."

"We haven't got that kind of dollars," confirms Warden Tallman. "It's not very fair for us to turn around and get hit with something like that."

And Minden's fire chief wonders where the money will come from. Their present equipment for structural fires, which he says is "too heavy to carry through the bush," was purchased with "ratepayer money."

"Our money comes from tax dollars," Booth says, "and how much can the people stand paying for something that they think isn't their responsibility?"

"As far as I'm concerned, we're going to try. But we really need more manpower."

The ministry has yet to discuss the changes with county council. Russell says he will be meeting with the county clerks March 22.

"They're not talking to the people who sign the cheques," says Warden Tallman. "I don't think they're going about it the right way."

"The ministry will have to lay it on the line and tell council what they're up against," says Booth. "It's really council's decision what to do now."

Walsh is particularly angry that the provincial government refuses to provide the municipalities with funding.

"It's a provincial cut-back, so I think it's their responsibility."

And Walsh is worried that his department will have to spread themselves too thin, especially this summer.

"If we were fighting a brush fire, what would we do if somebody's house went on fire? You can't be two places at one time."

"And if we have a brush fire in the summer, it's likely to be a honey," Walsh says. "It's our responsibility to take on that structural fire. It could be disastrous."

earning $41,500, up from $37,916, plus $6,900 in benefits.

Advertising costs are expected to decrease $1,400, to $3,500, and expenditures for building maintenance and repair will also decrease because renovations to the registry office have now been completed. The budget this year is $26,000 compared to last year's actual costs of $46,319.

In capital spending, because bricks are falling off the county building and some major renovations are required at Hyland Crest, the county has budgeted $30,000.

On the advice of financial consultants, the county will put $30,000 into the working fund provision instead of the customary $15,000.

In total, general government expenses are expected to reach $289,615, compared to $229,492 of actual spending in 1988.

Under Protection to Persons and Property, the biggest change is in the wolf bounty payments. Last year the county spent $6,650 in bounties but following a recent provincial ruling enforcing a ban on wolf bounties, it will end this practice as of March 31. Until that point, it expects to pay $2,000 in bounties.

Net expenditures on roads are targeted at $745,000, down from last year's actual spending of $753,331.

Since indications are pointing to an approval of the waste management master plan this year, $25,000 is being set aside to pay for the study. Yet because progress on the Haliburton Hospital Expansion seems stalled, council is not allocating any money to this project.

Council has no alternative but to go along with increases to the district health unit, $87,626 up from $79,980, and Children's Aid Society, $60,000 up from $52,057.

Budget requests for Hyland Crest were "pared significantly but there are things which simply have to be done," Fearrey said. Negotiations proved: Haliburton Highlands Snowmobile Club, $3,000; Paudash Trail Blazers, $1,000; Dorset Snowmobile Club, $1,000; Home Support, $1,000; Information Centre, $1,000; Guild of Fine Arts, $1,250; Haliburton County Fair Board, $500; Monmouth Fair Board, $500; and Cardiff Information Booth, $1,000. The LOOP made its funding request too late and

'We all know the importance of the chamber,' Fearrey said as he announced a $70,000 grant—$8,000 less than asked for

are now underway with the Ontario Nurses Association and while non-monetary issues have been settled, "we've got a list from here to Don Shortreed (across the room) of monetary issues."

The Chamber of Commerce will not get the $78,000 it requested, however the grant of $70,000 is an increase of $10,000 from last year's allocation.

"We all know the importance of the chamber," Fearrey said, noting that unlike other years, the grant will not be locked for three years so there is a chance for a review.

In trying to decide which donation requests should be honoured, Fearrey said "it's difficult to assess the impact they have on the community." Therefore, the committee is working on a policy which will provide guidelines for approval. For this year, the following grants were ap-

County questions bounty abuses

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

County council will bow down to the province's decree that bounties be no longer issued for such animals as the wolf. As of March 31, the county will stop paying $50 for each wolf pelt tagged and brought into municipal offices.

"It's history now and whether it's right or wrong, the province has decided to govern," Dysart Reeve Murray Fearrey said at last Wednesday's meeting.

But Fearrey took exception to a story in the Minden Times last week which quoted MNR Fish and Wildlife Supervisor, Stan Flemming as follows: "Flemming said the (county's bounty) system was subject to abuse! Because Haliburton has a wolf bounty and neighbouring counties do not, Flemming says people were bringing in wolves killed outside of Haliburton to collect the bounty. Last year there were 140 wolf bounties paid in Haliburton of those only 68 were collected by trappers. Flemming says many of the remaining 72 bounties were brought in from Bancroft or Bracebridge."

"Either the story is totally wrong or Mr. Flemming should provide evidence" that such abuses took place, Fearrey said.

Flemming's figures would mean the county paid $3,000 more than it should have and local bounty officers weren't doing their jobs to ensure the pelts came from within the county. "If he can't do that he should resign. It's no wonder they get tagged the Ministry of No Results."

"I did not try to imply a large percentage of those wolves were brought in illegally," Flemming says of how he answered the reporter's question of whether some pelts could be brought in from outside the county. "In any system there is always the potential for it to be abused. It's unfortunate (my comments) came out the way they did."

As well, the number 68 refers to how many pelts were brought in to the MNR office to be sealed before they went to one of the fur companies. If the wolf was caught in the warmer months, the pelt would be worthless and trappers would not try to sell them, therefore the seal would not be necessary. (Most of those pelts, Flemming added, were of coyotes, not timber wolves. And the number of bounties paid was 133.)

In the past year, the MNR was called to only one or two farms to deal with predator control problems. The ministry believes that the wolf bounty is a "broad brush approach" to eliminating such problems. Other counties which do not offer bounties do not have greater problems with wolves, Flemming says.

At the county council meeting, Fearrey said that if Flemming's words were mis-represented, there should be a retraction printed in the paper.

Editorials Squeezed

Local municipalities are being squeezed between rising expectations and lower provincial transfer payments, and it is local property owners who ultimately will feel the pain — in their wallets.

While budget figures for 1989 have not yet been worked out by area township councils, Haliburton County council made its spending estimates public last Wednesday, and to no one's surprise, the totals are up by more than the rate of inflation. County expenditures are projected to rise by 7.4 percent this year, a number which could have been much higher if council had not cut back substantially on budget requests from all of its departments. In fact, budget committee chairman Murray Farrey said expenditures could have risen by as much as 22 percent this year if every department got the money it asked for.

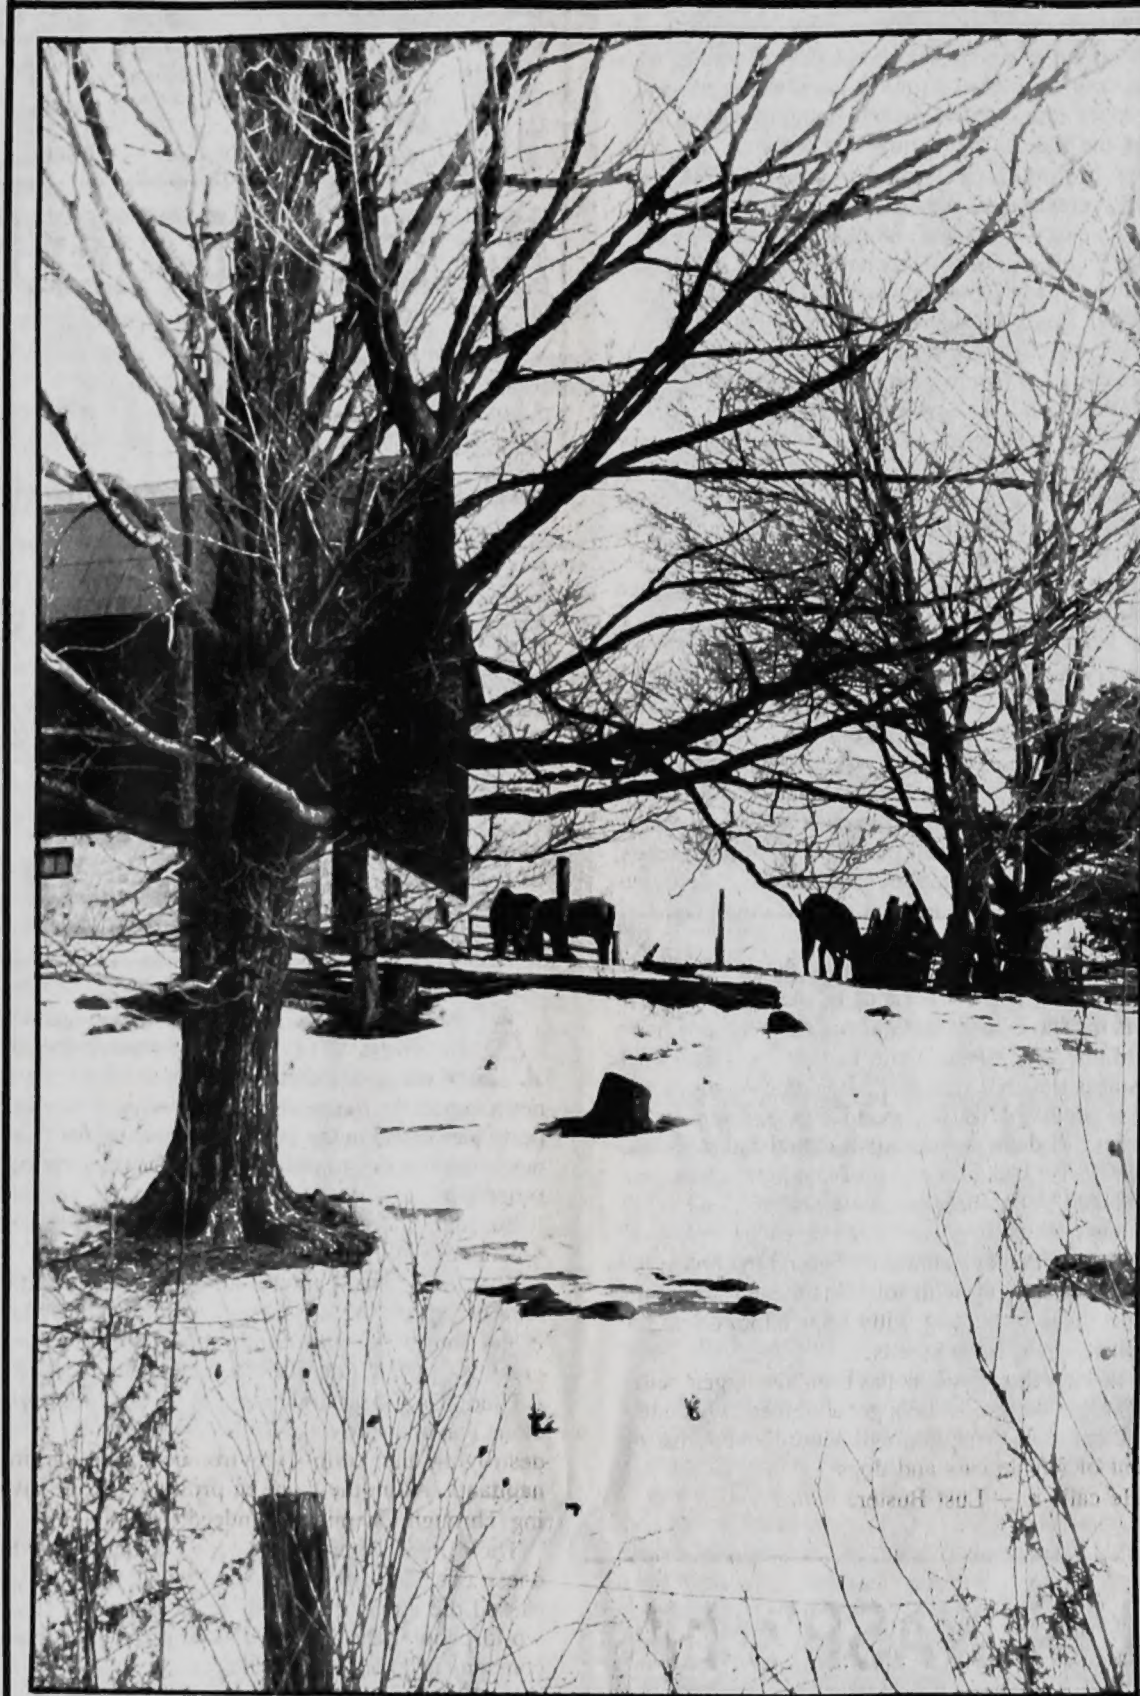

Why do expenditures continue to rise faster than the rate of inflation, and why does the local share of the budget keep growing? The answers are not simple, but a common theme underlies them — all of us expect more services, demand more services. When was the last time anyone argued forcefully for fewer frills, fewer government giveaways, fewer and more reasonably applied social services, a smaller and more efficient bureaucracy, and was not hooted down by the shrill voices of the left? When business leaders argued in the recent federal election for an end to the principal of universality of social programmes, less government interference in the marketplace and a serious effort to reduce the federal deficit — which now stands at more than $300 billion and eats up more than 40 cents of every tax dollar in interest costs alone — they were accused of being callous and greedy. The 'free ride' fallacy is so entrenched in the Canadian psyche that no amount of common sense, let alone economic theorizing, can diminish its impact on our daily lives.

Ironically, while this attitude informs the thinking and priorities of upper tier governments, cost cutting and efficiency are major concerns at the local level. By inclination, local politicians would prefer to spend as little as possible and keep tax increases as low as possible. In the past, this attitude may even have been detrimental to growth. Today, councillors are more willing to consider spending needs in a broader context, and they are aware that money must be allocated for essential services, and planning for future needs, even if that means budget increases that are higher than they would wish. But they seldom waste taxpayers' money, and they remain accountable on a daily basis for the budgets they have struck.

Some, perhaps much of the pressure for services that local politicians feel, does not come from their constituents, at least not directly. Much of it comes from the province. (This is especially true for board of education trustees, who must accommodate Ministry of Education demands and priorities with money raised for the most part from local property tax levies). Local councils must impliment pay equity, for example, under one of the most controversial and potentially unfair pieces of legislation ever passed in Ontario, and the costs will be reflected not only in salary adjustments, but in consulting fees to figure out whose job is worth what relative to another. In the meantime, general support and resource equalization grants from the province to counties and municipalities have been frozen. That means any increases in expenditures must come from local taxpayers.

There are signs that the province intends to put an even greater share of the essential service burden on local municipalities and in turn, on property owners, in the months and years to come. The cutback on forest firefighting services reported on elsewhere in this week's edition, has serious implications not only on the budget — local fire departments will have to purchase special pumps and other equipment — but on the viability of volunteer fire departments, since many members may quit if they have to take a first response role in forest fires.

The evidence is clear. The province is not prepared to adopt the responsible spending habits of local municipalities, and all of us will pay for that profligacy in property tax increases that substantially outstrip inflation. And we have only our own rising demands to blame.

State's power usurps that of people

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our readers write...

To the Editor:

It seems people may be waking up to what has been happening in this country. For some time the problem seems indefinable, but the more I have brooded over recent and not so recent events, the more things have clarified. I'm sure other people may have already nailed the problem on the head. The clash over the Lord's prayer and the reading of scripture in our public schools is a symptom of a larger problem. In this case the government thought its action was impartial and neutral. But in religion there is no such thing as neutrality. Whether you are Muslim, atheist, Hindu, Christian or don't care, you have picked sides. But here we must not allow the symptom to be confused with the sickness.

In an earlier letter I made reference to the beginning of our Charter of Rights and Freedoms, stating "Whereas Canada is founded upon principles that recognize the supremacy of God and the rule of law." (Note there is no "except" clause.) Conveniently, the foundation of the law that rules and the statement "rule of law and supremacy of God", means that our society stands answerable to God and his law. This puts a restriction on the power of society. Without this limit, the state or society would have unlimited power to pass any law no matter how immoral or bizarre and impose it on anyone it desired.

This is equal to a dictatorship, even in a social democracy where the rights of the individual are determined by the majority. The Magna Carta supposedly dealt with the divine right of kings, yet in Canada we have merely transferred divine right to the state. The individual's rights are sacrificed for what we call peace, security and strong government. How short our collective memory has become. Now in reality, the only rights we have are those which are allowed. Meanwhile the government or state goes on and grows on, becoming infinitely larger and more obnoxious, existing to serve its own interests, calling it "the good of society". The individual is lost, becoming non-essential, his life no longer his own.

Those with a Judeo-Christian background watch with disgust as the state becomes its own law and god. There still are those who believe the law is king and that the law is God's law and don't view government or society as a sacrosanct entity, but believe good government is characterized by accountability to God and the rule of law. Civil disobedience has its place when society or government violates that rule of law. In short people refuse to render to Caesar which is not his. But in the land of compromise we call it, "rocking the boat".

More and more the government acts not on definite guidelines of a constitution or the rule of law, but on pressure from various special interest groups, minorities or you name it. This is called, "acting on public interest". It was supposedly public interest that made the Bible offensive, (which I am sure comes as a surprise to a lot of the unoffended public). Those of a Judeo-Christian heritage perceived this as a kick in the face personally and a challenge to the supremacy of God. I personally view it as an act of a short-sighted government, which while claiming to protect rights, has merely stripped away more personal rights and freedoms of the individual. Canadians don't need more cretinous laws and feeble-minded restrictions to preserve our society. Instead our government, which often acts arbitrarily and without accountability, needs a swift kick in the rear-end to put it in its place. This present mess over the Lord's prayer in our schools has opened a Pandora's box. Our "Canadian way" is under a lot of stress to prove its worth, but is fouling up severely. I prefer to call our present state of affairs, the 'Canadian cafeteria', where you pick and choose and discard, or else make it up as you go along... a great foundation for a nation that is supposed to be 'strong and free'. One sure thing has been revealed in all this, and that is the power of the state has become too big for our own good.

Lindsay Roberts,
Haliburton

Future reflections

To the Editor:

A reflection to our future.

Tonight on the news, we learn that our veggies from Chile may be laced with cyanide. California lost its tomatoes and other crops to the frost last week. Our fruit and vegetable dealers are looking to Mexico, possibly Brazil and Africa. For more costly, also more heavily treated with pesticides.

WE ARE GETTING a little provoked over all these people who go around throwing their litter here, there and all over the place. Just the other day we noticed that beer drinkers, instead of saving their empty cans and taking them back for a refund or leaving them off to be re-cycled are throwing them on the ground or into a snow bank and leaving them on the sidewalks and roads. How in the world can we keep our county clean if this nonsense is going to continue? Let's all start to use a little common sense and place our debris in litter containers or leave them at home and take them to the dump where they belong.

According to Frank Orr in the Toronto Star the Los Angeles Kings did dangle centre Bernie Nicholls in front of several teams before the recent National Hockey League trade deadline but they wanted only a high-quality defenseman in exchange. Backliners command a higher price than forwards on the same level and when Kings refused to add to the package, their bids were turned down.

Our sympathy goes out this week to Molly and Lou Consky and family. Lou lost his mother last week when she died at the age of 95. She lived most of her life in Toronto and was a frequent visitor to Haliburton.

I would like to take this opportunity to once again thank the members of my Minden Fan Club for remembering me on my birthday which was Sunday, March 19. When you turn 49 it's nice to think that some friends are still thinking about you. Some of the members of the fan club are employed at the Minden Times. I think that it's quite an accomplishment when a native son from the village of Haliburton is fortunate enough to have a fan club in Minden. All joking aside I do appreciate these girls remembering me on my birthday.

The combined choirs of Haliburton United Church and Zion United Church will be presenting The Cantata "Emmanuel the Sacrifice" by Michael Parks at the Good Friday services on March 24 at Carnarvon at 9:00 a.m. and Haliburton at 11:15 a.m. All are welcome.

Just a reminder that if anyone has UPC labels on hand, please get them to Claude Parish at Easton's Valu-Mart, Haliburton by this coming Thursday, March 23. Proceeds will go to the Haliburton Minor Hockey Association.

They tell me that skiing is still good at Sir Sam's Ski area at Eagle Lake with plenty of skiing ahead. It's been a great year at Sir Sam's with plenty of snow and excellent skiing conditions for most of the winter. Yes, they had all this and snow making equipment too. Hundreds of skiers from all parts of Canada and the United States have been there to ski. Some other ski areas in the province have had problems this winter with the lack of snow. This was not the case at Sir Sam's Ski area.

It won't be long before people will be getting set for the influx of tourists and summer residents that means so much to the economy of Haliburton County. Now, more than ever it is essential that local people, who sometimes resent the busier streets, the longer lines at cash registers, and the noise of boats and motors on the lakes, take a moment to reflect on the fact that all this means great things for the economy of Haliburton County. It's been a great winter here with all the skiers, snowmobilers, hockey players, and curlers and now we can get ready to welcome the summer tourists and cottagers. If it wasn't for the dollars that they spend here our economy would be in bad shape. Let's do our best this coming summer to welcome our visitors and make them feel right at home.

It was with a touch of sadness that we heard the news that Rev. John Smith and his wife Velma and family would be leaving Haliburton soon to make their new home in Chatham, Ontario. The village of Haliburton and surrounding area can ill afford to lose people such as the Smiths who have played such a large part in the community. Everyone will have the opportunity to say goodbye to them and wish them the best of luck in the years that lie ahead when a community farewell banquet for the couple will be held at the Royal Canadian Legion at Haliburton on Saturday, April 1 at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $10 per person. All those wishing to obtain tickets may do so by contacting Bernice Schroter 457-1877, Darlene McElwain 457-2937, Kim Roberts 457-2426 or Irene Roberts at 457-2854. Tickets must be reserved by Saturday, March 25.

The Haliburton Pee Wees with a 5-5 tie and a 9-1 victory over Langton in the semi final round played at Haliburton over the weekend, now travel to Langton for games this Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The Toronto country-rock band Blue Rodeo, who were one of the attractions at Yamafest '88 held at Haliburton last winter, walked off with three Juno Awards last week. The band was also inducted into the Canadian Music Hall of Fame.

Words come true in a weird way

Harvey

SO OFTEN, it seems, when I write a column on a particular topic, a few days or a few weeks later there is a development that could have gone into the story.

Other times, something of interest will turn up several months later that ties in with an item, and someone will send me a clipping about it.

In the latter class was a clipping kept for me while I was away earlier this year. Some may recall an item about a man with the same name who died in Toronto not long after I left London. Because of the way he died—another player skated into his neck in an industrial league hockey game, causing him to bleed to death on the spot—it got a lot of publicity in my home town.

The column I had written was about a childhood friend who had apparently heard this story on the news, but missed the followup where they made it clear it wasn't me. When he saw me for the first time a couple of years later, HE nearly died of shock.

Well, I was given a clipping on the obituary of the widow of the man that died playing hockey in 1964, who apparently went out to work to support her kids, and had a most successful career in insurance before a heart attack felled her. Still a funny feeling to see your own name pop up unexpectedly out of a news story...

Another item from nearly a year ago referred to Florida's loose gun laws, and a fashion show in Miami that featured mini-revolvers that could be hidden in bows in the model's hairdos. Seemed like a bit of a spoof.

Well if it was, they aren't kidding anymore. Smith & Wesson, a gunsmith whose name has been synonymous with six-guns in police and detective novels, is apparently serious on the subject—with a series of smaller revolvers called the Ladysmith line. You might say they've given a new meaning to the term "feminine protection."

Seems they did some research that showed the number of women owning guns had doubled—to over 12 million—in the U.S. in the past five years, and they saw a market there.

The four scaled-down pistols come in a variety of finishes, with such features as rosewood stocks, and easy-pull triggers, and sell for about $500. a crack. Nothing to kid about here...

The recent reference to Japanese businesses, sparked a couple of references, too. Someone passed along a clipping that shows why the Americans are so sensitive to their development.

It pointed out that, while Japan started out by copying American automobiles and TV sets, in recent times they have been turning out products they have created themselves.

The examples were the Sony Walkman, the 8mm-videotape camera, and the compact disc player, with a reference as well to the advanced generation of memory microchips which they developed to leapfrog the Silicon Valley boys in California. The clincher: in 1988, Japanese companies registered more U.S. patents than American companies did!

In January, I wrote about Labatt's being Ontario's largest milk marketer, through the dairies it controls. Although I was talking about brand names, I couldn't lay my hands on the ones they control.

A story out a week or so ago says they control 37 per cent of Ontario's market with Silverwood's, Borden's, and Sealtest brands, among others. The story was explaining the Beatrice corporation had acquired enough dairies to grab about 35 per cent. With Neilsen's holding a 17 per cent share, the three companies now have nearly 90 per cent of the milk market in the bag, so to speak...

And while my back was turned, the former cigarette company Philip Morris (remember 'Johnny, stepping out of store windows across the country...') is combining its famous Kraft foods cheese division with its General Foods group, who bring you Maxwell House Coffee and Jell-O. Wonder how 'old Mister Kraft' will react to all this on TV...

And I had no sooner reported on the growing world of fragrances last month, than I came across some interesting material concerning the other side of the story—odours that people don't want to smell.

Most people have heard of L.L. Bean, the outfitter with the marvelous catalog of camping gear. Not so many have heard of G.G. Bean, who also lives in Maine, but whose claim to fame is a backyard business devoted to the stinkier side of life.

The ability of his two Great Danes to find polecats led him to develop a product called Skunk Kleen in 1979. He had a bit of a problem getting retailers to stock it, but because it works, it put him in business.

In his workshop/laboratory behind the house, he has since come up with solutions to such problems as pet urine in the rug, kitty litter odours, and the persistence of fishy smells.

The kitty litter product has been his biggest seller so far, but he figures he's got a winner in his latest development—one that will neutralize the mating scent of female cats and dogs.

He calls it—Lust Buster.

Pic of the Past

Our Pic of the Past takes us back to the year 1963 to the site of the present Head Lake Park at Haliburton. To the left of the picture is the Lorne Bailey Lumber Co. Ltd. mill and out front are piles and piles of logs. We were told they would be turned into approximately 1,100,000 board feet of lumber. The mill burned down in the spring of 1969. The photographer who took this photo was standing on top of a box car (lower right). Two mills were in operation in Haliburton at that time and they employed a total of 70 men and women. Photo and information courtesy of Lorne Bailey, Haliburton, Ontario.

Money and the roots of chemical evils

NORTHERN LIGHTS

Virginia
Muenzel

ARE YOU GETTING the impression that it's not safe to eat anything that doesn't come out of our own gardens? Every week there's a news report of dangerous levels of carcinogenic pesticides found in the fresh foods that we eat. The nut who laced the grapes with cyanide seems almost redundant.

Ed and I are seriously considering a solar greenhouse. What other recourse do we have?

It's money, you know. It all comes down to the love of money. Which, as we've long been taught, is the root of all evil. And, apparently this love creates a potent side effect; short-sightedness.

Union Carbide, Dupont, and the giant oil cartels alone have already come frighteningly close to destroying the earth's environment and its inhabitants. All in the name of profits. "Better Living Through Chemistry" indeed!

Their logic is truly amazing. Union Carbide doesn't accept responsibility for the 'accident' that caused the agonizing deaths of thousands of third world people. But I'll lay odds someone from the company is taking top secret notes on the long term side effects.

Dupont claims it's unreasonable to expect them to stop producing CFC's within 10 years. These chemical companies also spend millions of dollars convincing the food growers that they need to use those dangerous pesticides in order to grow a profitable crop, but precious little to develop safe, organic ways of controlling pests. Of course, the bugs just mutate, making it necessary to develop yet stronger poisons.

Do these people not have children? Do they pick the tainted food, hand it to their offspring and watch them ingest carcinogenics? Better Living Through Chemistry, eh?

After all, they tell us, consider all the people who will be out of jobs if we have to stop making these products. I can't believe the unions actually swallow that right along with all the other goodies in their work environment. "We all have to work to make money to buy food for our children." Maybe their brains have already mummified.

Then there's the oil cartels, who every day, send longer, more voluminous tankers across the stormy seas, always satisfied that most of them store it. We've all heard of the Alberta Oil Sands. And now, thanks to the wonderful technology of tankers, tourists may flock to visit the beautiful oil sands on the beaches of Vancouver and south to the shores of Washington and Oregon. In fact, just a couple of weeks ago, an oil deposit was made off the shores of a Hawaiian island.

Who needs white sands anyway. All that clear, blue water with the whales spouting, dolphins playing, sea birds singing, people fishing, swimming, surfing must get tiresome. Especially to the native populations.

There are an awful bunch of TV commercials thrown at us everyday. But there was one around a few years ago that needs reviving. No dialogue. Just a video shot of a man astride a horse on a hilltop. The camera pans down to a garbage dump, to smokestacks, to a freeway barely visible through the thick brown smog. Then back to a close-up of the man, an aging native North American with braids, a feather and a tear drop sliding down his leathery cheek.

And we called them savages!

People seldom improve when they have no other model but themselves to follow. Goldsmith

WERE WE ALL to be the same, who should be the prototype? Could you really tolerate a whole bunch of people who were just like you, with your strengths, but also your weaknesses? Should we all be the smartest person, or the one with the perfect smile, or the most socially renowned?

any day. Music on most pop stations is so formulated and unimaginative, who wouldn't prefer listening to reggae or salsa or zouk? Quebec City is our country's most beautiful city, made rich because of its cultural uniqueness. French signs only seem natural.

If you try to learn more about these differences, you can understand people's pride in their religion, or their culture, or their personal struggle to find a place in Canada. Dare it be said that not all things Canadian are absolutely wonderful and couldn't withstand a little prodding in another direction.

At the same time, those who do not group people together, can stand up and say, 'No, this isn't right' when something truly bothers them. Newcomers must accept certain things about this country. It isn't right that lawyers are murdered in Toronto courtrooms, that bombs are placed in Canadian planes by people seeking refuge in Canada, that religious wars are re-fought every 12th of July. Note 60 Minutes on television last week.

But by the time this letter makes the paper, St. Patrick's Day will have come and gone.

Maple sap will be running if sulfur dioxide or acid rain has not killed all the trees.

But the ice will go out by April 14 and the suckers will start running by April 28.

Then the Lady Slippers and Dog Tooth Violets will start by May 10. By May 24 the black flies will be in full swing.

I'll have the garden in by June 1. But then the holidayers will come in full force by July. There will be more beer cans on my lawn and also at the beach. I'll have to keep the grandkids away from the road. The parties and fires will be a concern, lest they set the forest on fire.

Most and worst of all will be the high powered boats. With operators under the influence of alcohol and drugs.

I feel sorry for our O.P.P. who are staffed to serve off season. They are also shorted by staff taking summer holidays, which I don't blame. That's when I took mine, after 34 years with the company. I had seniority.

When I talked to friends and neighbours, they suggest writing to our M.P.P. and push for more O.P.P. staff during the summer months, but what will we do with extra officers during the winter months. May for every 500 holidayers they could bring an officer from their home detachment to babysit them.

I guess since I have so little time left in life now—I have retired—maybe I'll just water and weed my organic garden. Get things ready to store for winter so I won't be poisoned.

Then I'll sit on my favourite stump behind the tractor shed, out of the holidayer's way and kick around those little red ants.

But there is one satisfaction. I know fall will come again and with it will be peace to the Highlands.

Yours truly,
William Jeffrey,

The gift of sight costs little, means much

To the Editor:

After 42 years as a journalist—and more as a reader for pleasure—I have no doubt which is the most important sense to me—sight.

Without it, I could never have read thousands of wonderful books, seen the great films of the past half century or the great plays and operas of several centuries.

As a travel columnist, who has been in more than 100 countries, I could not have been perpetually amazed at the scenic variety of this universe without sight.

That is why I support Operation Eyesight Universal. For anything that can be done to help sightless persons provides them with the first step to the wonders we, the sighted ones, so much enjoy.

I suppose I particularly consider the benefits of sight at Easter because it occurs at a time of year when there is beginning to be so much more to see. One small example: we have crocuses planted in a protected place outside our kitchen window. My wife always records the date of the first bloom. The earliest has been March 9. But they have always bloomed by Easter.

A donation of a few spare hours of work or a contribution of unused eyeglasses will help someone else see the flowers growing in their garden.

Operation Eyesight Universal's address is P.O. Box 123, Stn. M, Calgary, Alberta T2P 2H6. It only takes $25 to restore a blind person to sight in a developing country.

Sincerely,
Percy Rowe,
Contributing Editor, Travel,
Toronto Sun.

Just as we fight American culture, we should understand why it's noble to be first among equals

Put another way, when we talk about being "Canadian", does this mean we should all be middle class WASPs (White Anglo Saxon Protestants)? Would that really be a good thing for our country? The problem I'm having with one of the side effects of the Lord's Prayer controversy is the backlash against people of other cultures. In defending one of our traditions—something I support—many people seem to have a very myopic view of just what Canadian means.

First of all, nearly every great accomplishment man has known has been the result of someone looking at things differently. We tend to overlook the fact that some of the greatest thinkers and inventors may have been outcasts in their day, living beyond the realm of the all-important socially acceptable. Their peers saw only their differences; time has allowed us to see their great contribution which came from rising above the norm.

But before one starts looking for people's differences, there has to be the premise that differences don't matter. You have to accept that you don't judge people by their physical characteristics, whether they "walk" with a wheelchair, the way they talk, their social "class" or even in a small town, who their parents are.

Once you master that, you can look for ways a person's—or culture's—differences enrich society. Give me Kensington Market over a shopping mall croach on the positive aspects of my culture—the saying of the Lord's Prayer—I leave them be.

But saying "immigrants" are taking away our culture is parallel to the old belief they took away our jobs. How many Canadian parents are instilling a good work ethic in their children? How many Canadians are prepared to start at the bottom so they can learn the skills needed to get to the top?

And who's to say that third-generation Japanese aren't Canadian? We did during World War Two. Unlike the Toronto police union spokesman's suggestion, some blacks are Canadians, surprisingly enough, and do have a right to express their discontent. Ben Johnson was a Canadian until the scandal, whereupon it became clear he was born in Jamaica.

Besides that, before blue-blood Canadians start attacking people for changing the face of the nation, let's think back to when the first white settlers arrived here and the havoc which ensued in native cultures. Remember who we call our First Peoples.

Ultimately, it is not wrong for parents to instill a sense of the past in their children, nor a sense of values born from that past. Yet to react with animosity towards all changes to our future is to deny children the resources they will need in this modern world where boundaries are no longer clearly defined. Just as we fight against the dominant American culture, we should understand why it is noble to be one of the firsts among equals.

Lumbermen lacrimose after loss to determined Drillers

THIS WEEK IN THE M.H.L.

by Chip Trueman

OKAY, LET'S GET it over with. I'm depressed enough as it is. Deblers Drillers beat Haliburton Lumber on Sunday night by a score of 12-5. The win boosts Deblers playoff record to 2 and 0, while the lumbermen slip to one and one.

After a winning season, the loss was hard to take for Haliburton Lumber players. Some of them sobbed and wept openly, unafraid to show their emotions. Others found comfort in joking around and telling stories about previous "great games". I must say that Andy Hodgson took it worse than anyone. When I left at midnight, he was still laying facedown on the dressingroom floor, kicking his feet and pounding his fists. His therapist doubts if he will ever be able to play again.

The Drillers on the other hand were excited, to say the least. They came to win and did so in fine fashion. Floyd Henry was the star of the night, scoring seven goals—definitely an individual playoff record! Bob Woodcock got a hat trick while Roy Boughner and Scott Rae netted one each. Kevin Finch played a great game in goal, filling in for a vacationing Steve Kirkpatrick. Finch held Haliburton Lumber to a mere five goals, those coming from Ron Yake, Bernie Upton, Chris and Andy Hodgson. Deblers Drillers are certainly in the drivers seat now!

In the middle game Emmerson Lumber got tied up in what, for the most part, was a very close match with Curry Motors. The motormen started off the scoring and then went ahead 2-0, but the lumbermen skated back to tie it up 2-2 after one period of play. Later in the game Emmerson Lumber went into the lead and never looked back. Curry's came close to tying it up several times, but they could not get the puck past Vince Duchene. Final score was Emmerson Lumber 9, Curry Motors 4.

The Lumbermen join Deblers as the only undefeated teams after two games. The motormen drop to 1 and 2. Could Emmerson Lumber be the team to beat? Look for a great hockey game next week when they take on Haliburton Lumber. By the way points in the above match—on the E.L. side go to Ed Davis (hat trick), Steve Cooper (hat trick), Norm Barry, Billy Whittaker and Barry Boice—on the C.M. side go to Kevin Phillips and Dean Curry with a pair each.

Last but not least was the battle between Elstone Motors and Bishop and Wilson. Both teams went into this game with records of zero and one. Each team needed a victory, but as we know in the harsh reality of the M.H.L. only one team wins. On Sunday night that team was Bishop and Wilson. They defeated Elstone's 8-1. The first half was relatively even. Motormen's goalie Dave Elstone held the surveyors to a narrow 3-1 lead. In the third period however, Darryl Stamp went on a rampage, scoring four straight goals for Bishop and Wilson. Other B&W markers went to Luke Schell (hat trick) and Roger Scheffee. Elstone's lone goal went to Mike Rae. Again Kevin Finch was a big factor in the net for Bishop and Wilson. He virtually shut down Elstone's scoring machine.

So there you have it. After two games Curry Motors and Elstone Motors have their backs to the wall, Bishop and Wilson and Haliburton Lumber are skating on thin ice while Emmerson Lumber and Deblers Drillers are in pole positions.

Unfortunately, I will be away next Sunday. It's Easter weekend and my folks in Burlington still believe in hiding those candy eggs behind the couch so that I can hunt for them in the morning. You're on your own guys. Good luck!

I'm Chip and that was... this week in the M.H.L.

PeeWees have upper hand

Saturday was the beginning game of the semi final OMHA playoffs between Haliburton and Langton. In the first period Haliburton came out strongest against Langton, totally dominating the play and getting the first go-ahead goal on a shot from the point by Jeff Black. Notwithstanding continued strong play by the Haliburton team they were unable to add another tally to the score during the first period.

In the second period the Haliburton team came out flat and scumbly. Langton is an experienced team and it didn't take them long to take advantage of the lull in the Haliburton attack. The game ended in a 3-3 tie, forcing an overtime period.

Again in the overtime period the Haliburton team appeared to be disorganized and not ready to take on the offensive role that they had demonstrated throughout the year. Langton was able to capitalize and took a lead of 5-3 with approximately 5 minutes left to play.

Haliburton's offense again took over in the final minutes of the game and they were able to score twice to end game one at a 5-5 tie, each team receiving one point.

In game one Haliburton out-shot Langton 53-10.

Scoring for Haliburton were Jeff Black, Corby Kent, Mark Morissette and Kevin Morissette.

On Sunday Haliburton showed the offense that it had been noted for throughout the year and played strong aggressive hockey for three periods. They were again first on the scoreboard in the initial minutes of the first period and continued to add tallies throughout the game, ending in a 9-1 victory.

Scoring for Haliburton were Steven McCracken (4), Greg Stamp, Jonathan Bishop, Mike Billings, Kevin Morissette and Mark Morissette with one a piece.

The next three games of this series will be played in Langton on Friday, Saturday and Sunday of the coming weekend.

Novice Huskies outscore Minden in first-of-5 game

On Sunday, March 19 a large crowd of hockey fans in Haliburton thrilled to see the OMHA PeeWees easily drub their visitors from Langton. But it was those who stayed for the game immediately after who got their moneys' worth. The Haliburton House League Novice Huskies took on the Minden Novice C Monarchs in the first game of the final playoff series for the Championship of their division in the Tri County Hockey League.

The Huskies came into the game after a week long layoff, having handily defeated Ops in two games in the first playoff round. Minden, on the other hand, had just played four close games in less than a week to oust Fenelon Falls.

The Haliburton-Minden rivalry lives on. The tension was mounting. As the Huskies walked to the ice the players and parents of the victorious Pee Wees lined both sides of the corridor and gave a heartfelt, thunderous cheer to welcome them onto the ice. Despite this rousing send off the Huskies' rustiness showed in the first period as Minden dominated.

However, the Huskies scrambled and checked and kept Minden off the scoreboard. Toward the end of the first period, Gavin and Tracy arrived to drop a huge "GO HUSKIES GO" banner behind the Haliburton team bench. Inspired, the Huskies took control in the first minute of the second when Danny Jordan displayed his puck control. Carrying the puck to within 10 feet of the net he stopped, faked a shot stepped back and fired.

By this time Matthew Billings was perched on the edge of the crease and made no mistake, scoring his first of the season, with that new stick his Grandpa had just given him. Minden came back tying the game on a goal by B.J. Redner set-up by the smooth play making of Cameron Neville and taking the lead when their big centre Chuck Hopkins got the puck unmolested in the Haliburton zone and fired a quick, booming shot from the right faceoff circle.

The Huskies tried. They skated, hustled and checked but so did Minden. As the third period wore on the Huskies forced the play giving Minden numerous breakout opportunities. Finally with a minute and a half to go it was Mike Morissette to Greg Forgrave to Ian Clements at centre. Ian, the sniper, rushed into the Minden end, cut left, came back to his right and lifted the puck into the net setting the stage for sudden death overtime. In overtime the play was hard and rugged and the checking was closer than ever. Then it was Morissette, again, up to Clements who got it up to Jordan who cut across in front of the net, slipping the puck past the Minden goalie. It was sudden victory for Haliburton, 3 to 2 in overtime in the first game of the best three out of five championship series.

Honourable mentions for this game go to hustling wingers John McMahon and Jason Henry, hard checking defenceman Devon Dart and goalie Kevin Harrison who brought his old friends the goal posts to help him out. The series resumes in Minden with games on Tuesday and Thursday at 6:00 p.m.

Sir Sam's to install quad lift

In the wake, of a record season which has not yet ended, Sir Sams Ski area at Eagle Lake is planning to add a fixed quadruple chair lift this summer, substantially increasing its capacity to move skiers to the top of the slopes.

Other plans include expansion of the chalet and improvements to the trail system.

Last summer, snowmaking was installed at Sir Sams, and coupled with an extensive advertising campaign, the investment drew many skiers to the area who had never come to the Highlands before.

Owner Bob Bishop told council of the expansion plans and Monday, and also asked the municipality to assign a high priority to repairing the paved road which leads to the ski hill and other cottage and resort properties on Eagle Lake.

Bishop estimated the cost of the expansion planned for this summer at $680,000, which he said "is a substantial investment in Haliburton at any time."

While council did not have to make a formal response on Monday to the information provided by the ski hill owner, councillors were quick to praise Bishop and other members of his family for the growth and improvements they have facilitated at Sir Sams in the past year.

"I want to commend you for what you've done out there" said reeve Murray Fearrey. His statement was supported by other councillors, who praised the advertising in connection with the ski hill which has helped to create a stronger identity for Haliburton as a winter recreation destination.

Frost Centre mixes syrup with forest management

The Leslie M. Frost Natural Resources Centre will host two important events on Saturday, March 25. A day of fun and learning is in store at the Frost Centre's annual Maple Syrup Day, with horse drawn hay rides to the sugar bush, plus tours and activities for the whole family. Watch for more information.

On the same day, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. the Frost Centre's planning team of resource management specialists will be on hand for the timber management plan Public Information Centre.

The Information Centre is a one day opportunity for all interested parties to view and discuss alternatives and preliminary proposals for the production of the draft Timber Management Plan. The information presented will consist of the following: the potential forestry areas/operations for the period 1990-2010; the alternative locations for primary road corridors which are projected for the 20 year term of the plan and the preferred or most acceptable alternative; the alternative locations for primary and secondary roads for the next five years and the preferred or most acceptable alternative; the identified areas of concern (i.e., deer wintering yards, recreational areas and trails, fish habitat areas, etc.); and the alternative ways that operations may be carried out in these areas and the preferred or most acceptable way of operating.

Timber Management Plans (T.M.P.'s) give an overview of the forest and set forth objectives for managing the timber resource. The T.M.P.'s determine how much timber should be harvested, where, when and how so the forest can be renewed and maintained in healthy condition.

The Frost Centre's planning team is preparing a new T.M.P. for the Frost Centre Crown Management Unit. Although the plan covers a 20 year period, from 1990 to 2010, it will be renewed every five years to allow revisions and adjustments that may become necessary.

THIS WEEK Rotary donates cash to local causes

Four local organizations and causes are the latest recipients of donations from the Rotary Club of Haliburton.

The Highland Games scheduled to take place for the first time at Haliburton's Glebe Park on June 24 will be assisted by a $2000 contribution from the local Rotarians.

Another local project to which the Haliburton Club will contribute is the fund raising effort by Haliburton Concert Series organizers to purchase a new grand piano. Some $600 of Rotary funds will help that effort reach its goal.

The United Church ladies, who cook and serve dinner for the club's weekly meeting, have been given $500 by the club to help meet the cost of commercial dishwasher for the church's kitchen.

A donation of $350 also was approved for the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School junior football club, who won the 'AA' Central Ontario championship last fall, the first time a local football club has advanced that far in post season competition. The money will help defray the cost of mementos to be purchased for team members.

Beef vote affects even small-scale producers

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

THE AMALGAMATION of farm and family is a source of insurmountable pride for John and Rhonda Francis. But, along with many other local cattle farmers, they fear that a proposed commission that would regulate all marketing of beef cattle could kill incentive for future beef producers.

Last year John and Rhonda won the Ray Welch Memorial Farmer Of The Year Award, donated by the Haliburton County Farmers Association. They presently have 39 head of cattle on their 100-acre farm, but are worried about the future if the commission goes through.

"There's no possibility I can think of how it will work," says John. "The only ones that can gain from it are the ones that are already making a good living. They may benefit.

"I can't stand jurisdiction from people who don't understand what's happening in the family farm," he adds.

In February 1988, Ontario Minister of Agriculture and Food, Jack Riddell established the Ontario Beef Marketing Task Force, and the producer vote is being held as a result of a study conducted by that group.

And on April 14, anyone who had four cattle for longer than two months on their land in the last two years is eligible to vote on a proposed producer-controlled marketing commission which would regulate the sale of all beef cattle in the province.

Then, those who are in favor can vote on a national beef cattle marketing plan with the authority to manage supply and determine price.

Godfrey Tyler, Haliburton County's representative of the Ontario Cattlemen's Association, fears many beef producers don't understand the impact of this vote. He says each person eligible to vote must take time studying the issues because the proposed commission will have an impact on everyone.

"Even if you're a hobby farmer or a dairy farmer you can vote, so you'd better know what's going on," says Tyler.

"This is something that will have a major impact on this county (because most beef production is on a small scale). Whether you like it or not, we're probably the first ones to lose out — so much for free enterprise."

Groups in opposition

The referendum puts the Ontario Cattlemen's Association in direct opposition to a newly-formed group, Beef Producers For Change. "I haven't seen any representatives come to this area, yet they're trying to push through a major change," says Tyler.

The proposed commission covers such topics as price pooling, subsidies, freezer/dealer trade and price hikes.

Under the commission, the government could decide all terms and conditions under which cattle is sold, including the decision whether to pool or commingle a producer's stock with others. So, if good cattle are pooled with poor quality cattle, the prices would be averaged with both producers receiving same price.

"The whole basis of this industry is that each producer should want to make top quality beef," says Godfrey. "But I don't want someone else getting money for my hard work, so why bother trying?"

John Francis agrees. He says that anyone can "get scruff cattle, put them on the feed lots for six months and get the same dollar as good, clean beef."

"I just want the freedom I've always had," says Francis. "And I don't think many people realize that they will lose their freedom. Even the small producer is affected here."

OCA president Jim Magee says members of the OBPC have interpreted the marketing system incorrectly by stating it would get beef producers a cost-of-production subsidy. According to Magee,

Cattlemen are urged to learn more about beef commission agriculture minister Riddell has told legislature that "there is not going to be one extra penny for producers under the new system."

Magee also says that beef producers are not the only people who have a stake in the proposed commission.

"Other groups are becoming concerned about the proposed commission, too. Consumers are wondering what it will do to beef prices. Small abattoirs see that it's going to slash their business."

Small farmers will be hampered

At present, beef producers can sell what they want to who they want. But the proposed commission prohibits the sales to a local abattoir or dealer, as well as freezer beef directly to the consumer. And this could "severely hamper a lot of farmers in this county," says Tyler. Freezer trade accounts for 70 per cent of the Francis family's cattle business.

But consumers would be affected as well. It could mean that some producers will be forced to sell black market beef underground.

OCA members are also concerned with supply management, where prices are increased by decreasing supply. Cattle herds will have to be cut, but beef imported from other countries won't be managed.

Also, beef isn't a "unique" product with no substitute like milk or eggs. So, if beef prices go up, consumers can buy chicken or pork.

If the majority of those eligible vote for the proposed commission, the OCA's 49-member board of directors will be cut and replaced with 13 provincial zone directors. Five appointees of the 18-member board will represent consumers, truckers, retailers, auction markets and packers.

"I'm elected from Haliburton County to sit on the provincial board," says Tyler. "I talk directly to people and bring their concerns to provincial ears."

Haliburton County would be lumped together with Peterborough, Victoria and Durham, with one producer director to represent this zone on the commission.

"Right now, with the OCA, we're all cattlemen and nobody has to moderate our meetings," says Tyler. "But if you've got five outside people appointed by the government, it would be difficult to maintain the cattlemen's concerns."

"Now, we have to do business with all these people, because [producers] are just a portion of the whole process," he adds. "But sometimes we don't see eye to eye."

Tyler asks anyone with questions about the beef vote to give him a call. Those eligible to vote should be receiving their ballots now. And when it comes time to vote, he and John Francis want cattlemen to consider the consequences.

"If this [commission] comes in, our kids won't be able to carry on the farm," says Francis. "As far as holding a family together in a farm atmosphere, it just won't work."

"All incentive for my boys to keep cattle will be killed."

Beef producers can find out more about the beef vote at the annual meeting of the Haliburton County Farmers Association on April 2 at Tom Dawson's maple sugaring operation on County Road 1 near Gelert. Local MP William Scott will be a guest speaker, and the gathering starts at 3:15 p.m. with a tour of Wintergreen Maple Products.

An additional information meeting will be held in the Lindsay Agricultural Office's conference centre on April 6 at 8 p.m.

Dysart questions bus policy

by LEN PIZZEY

Editor

The board of education's policy of sending school busses to pick up children in limited services areas came under fire from Dysart et al council on Monday. Responding to a letter from board transportation supervisor Jim Bradley which suggested municipal roads are not being adequately sanded, council said the board should say no to picking up youngsters of people who chose to live in limited services, seasonal residential zones.

"The policy they have is that they'll go anywhere," reeve Murray Fearrey said, noting that the intent of SR2 zoning is to indicate to cottage and home buyers that they cannot expect the same level of municipal services that are available to people in other residential zones. That includes plowing and sanding. As well, roads built to municipal standards in SR2 zones frequently are hilly and contain many curves, not all of them with lengthy lines of sight.

Fearrey also pointed out that while the board sometimes sends a small bus along remote rural roads, they are replaced by larger buses as more people move into the area. A road that is negotiable by a small bus may not be as easily travelled by a larger vehicle, he noted.

Road superintendent Howard Roberts said the municipality has used more sand this year than ever before. It had 8000 yards on hand before the winter started, and all of that could be gone by the end of this week if more snow falls.

Three years ago, Roberts said, Dysart used only two trucks to sand its roads. This year, four trucks were needed to carry out the task.

Roberts also suggested that school buses travel faster on some municipal roads than is appropriate. He said you couldn't keep up to them in a car and if you did "you'd be irresponsible."

Roberts said the buses try to keep to the same schedule in winter as they do in other seasons.

Fearrey said the municipality "can't cover every situation", even if it had applied 50 percent more sand than it did this year. As for salt, Fearrey said it is just too expensive for the municipality to use.

"I think (the board) has to say no at some point to where they send buses," Fearrey said.

Council agreed to send a letter to the board suggesting that people who live in SR2 zones should be required to take their children to the nearest bus route on maintained roads.

Transportation supervisor Jim Bradley said in an interview that the board's policy on bussing is to pick up children in Kindergarten, Grades 1 and 2 on the publicly maintained road closest to their home. All other students could be required to walk up to a mile to catch the bus, but Bradley confirmed that they seldom

"If it's zoned seasonal then no, we wouldn't necessarily go and get the child," Bradley said. There are "15 or 20 situations" in the county where people must drive their children to meet a school bus route, he said.

Bradley also confirmed Fearrey's comment that small buses are being replaced by larger busses. It happens when more people move onto a route and small busses get filled. As well, because the cost difference between a small bus and large one is not great, bus companies often prefer to buy larger vehicles, which can carry more passengers command a higher rate.

Bradley suggested the municipalities and the board should get together to discuss the matter further.

"I think it's something that is going to grow as time goes on," Bradley said. "I don't know how we can resolve it. It's a gray area."

Dysart firm on industrial park, rental buildings not welcome

Dysart et al council appears ready to stand firm on its original intent in creating low cost industrial park lots. The lots, only a few of which remain unsold, were intended to facilitate expansion by local businesses and to create new jobs in the community. In the past few years, many local service businesses have relocated their storage yards and warehouse facilities to the park, and a number of businesses are producing products on the site, including W.H. Treads and Picard and Holden Ltd. roof trusses.

Three years ago, council turned down a request from a local entrepreneur who wanted to construct a large building on a lot in the park and rent out areas of it to smaller enterprises that could not afford to build space of their own.

Now, council must once again decide if a rental use is appropriate. A business person has asked to buy a lot and construct a mini storage facility on it.

While it agreed there is a need for a storage facility in the community, council was reluctant to consider selling a lot for that purpose. It felt other land outside the park might be more suitable, but did not make a final decision on the request, deciding instead to consider the whole matter further.

It also noted that a rental storage facility already is under construction in the park, but it is on property owned by Rodco Enterprises, and is considered ancillary to the main use by Rodco as a warehouse and shop.

Haliburton can offer more than rest and relaxation

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

AN ESTIMATED 15 per cent increase in land registration this past fiscal year is likely a result of the housing crisis in Metropolitan Toronto, says Haliburton County land registrar Melvin Flood.

And, with increasingly rising interest rates, Flood predicts that next year could see "another 10 per cent increase in our workload, depending on how the economy as it stands.

"The economical situation in Toronto has just skyrocketed over the past few years. In Toronto you look at an average of $300,000 for a home — and not much of a home, either. Here the same house might be $100,000 or $150,000 on average.

"The economic climate here is growing, but the cost of homes and land have stayed pretty low," he says.

Flood states Toronto, Orangeville, Newmarket and Barrie are areas where it is almost impossible for many to buy a home. "Prices have inflated right out of sight."

And, many people have converted their cottages into homes to get out of the rat-race of the city.

Flood also says that selling a home to move up north is a good investment for retired people.

"With the money you can get now for selling a house in the city, you could be reasonably comfortable in your retirement years. And there certainly is a higher quality of living up here."

As a former Toronto resident, Flood understands why more people are moving up north. He's been working in land registry since 1962. After working in Toronto for 11 years, he was promoted to an office in Chatham. Ten years later, in 1984, he worked in Wellington County.

"In a government job, you have to move around if you want to get ahead," he says.

And, although a higher salary was the main reason for all his moves, Flood much prefers the country to city life.

"Your lifestyle here is a lot better than living in a large community," he says. "Here there is a closeness among people."

And Flood likes the fact that he's raising his children in a tight-knit community.

"You don't have to worry about your kids all the time," he says. "I'm not saying that there aren't problems like drugs here, but you know your neighbors and you know the families of the kids your children are playing with.

"It's easier to keep an eye on your kids in this environment."

Flood and his wife initially made friends in the area through their children. Their son plays hockey and their daughter skates, so they met fellow parents while cheering their children on.

And when Flood was out of town attending a land registrar's meeting in Newmarket last week, his son had a hockey game in Fenelon Falls.

"Well, my wife doesn't drive, so he would have had to miss that game," he says. "But one of the mothers was good enough to drive him. She didn't have to, so we really appreciated it.

"But it's not just that one mother, it's all the parents on the league. You could probably find that in Toronto, but not to the same degree."

A quieter life

And Flood much prefers the calm, quiet lifestyle

The workload of Melvin Flood and co-workers Cheryl Howe, seated, and Audrey Mac-Martin has increased 15 per cent of a small community.

He remembers having to battle traffic for two hours to get to work every morning. Of course, that was on the days when he didn't have to take the bus.

"Being able to walk to work if you want to, or have to, is great," he says. "My friends in Toronto hardly believe it when I tell them."

Still, Flood isn't new to Haliburton County. His parents had a cottage in the area since he was five years old, so coming here brought back a lot of good memories of summer fun. But he never expected to move here.

"If I was told I could work here 20 years ago, I probably would have said no. But as you get older, your values change.

"You want to get back the environment you enjoyed when you were growing up," he says. "So, when I applied for this job I remembered how I enjoyed the cottage and figured, why not?"

Flood has noticed how much the county has progressed since he used to come up in the summers as a child. And he wouldn't mind staying, especially considering the area's potential to grow further.

"I guess that's why I applied for the job," he says. "I knew the community and I knew where it was headed."

Flood is thankful for all the guidance he received when he moved to Haliburton County. And Jean Jackson, the retiring land registrar he replaced, was especially helpful in getting Flood settled, not only in his job, but also in the community. Flood joined the office while Mrs. Jackson was finishing her last two weeks of work.

"She invited my family up to her home for our first weekend in the county," he says. "So we didn't have to worry about accommodation, which is difficult with two children, while we were looking for a new home. Within that one weekend, we had it all done."

"Of course, the fact that her husband is a real estate agent didn't hurt any, either," Flood adds.

Aside from anyone considering buying a home or property, most who use the Haliburton County Land Registry office are solicitors and title searchers.

Flood says the office runs smoothly with co-workers Cheryl Howe and Audrey MacMartin, and he appreciates how much the county has assisted them in renovating the office.

"People have been good to me here, and I'm thankful for it," he says. "I would never move back to Toronto."

Late Madeline Austin lived through profound changes

by MARTHA PERKINS

Staff Reporter

The granddaughter of Dysart's first reeve has died. Madeline Austin passed away on Tuesday (March 21) morning. She was 88.

Preferred to be called Mrs. Elwood Austin, Mrs. Austin was a well-known figure in the area. With her strong links to the past, she also lived through a time of great transformation in the village she had always called home.

Her paternal grandfather was Capt. John Lucas, who as described in Nila Reynolds' book, In Quest of Yesterday, was acclaimed as the Municipality of Dysart's first reeve in 1867. He and his wife Eliza had five children, among whom was Mrs. Austin's father, John Lucas Jr.

Together the two Johns owned and operated the village's most popular hotel, the Grand Central. A picture of the hotel, with young Madeline present as a baby, was used as a Haliburton Highlands Museum poster last summer and the hotel stood on the site of the present-day Stedman's. The Village Barn shopping complex was the hotel's livery stable.

Young Madeline would spend many hours at the hotel but another important building in her life was the home she occupied next to the Post Office. Built by John Jr. in 1907, it was the first house in the area to be lit by carbide gas and have a modern bathroom.

After her marriage to Elwood Austin, of the Austin Lumber family, the couple would move back to this house, a popular spot for many social teas and meetings as Mrs. Austin fulfilled her role as president of the Haliburton branch of the Red Cross Society. The house was the hub of her activities. It was also the place where her father died, a very tragic period in Mrs. Austin's life.

The Austins had three children. Mrs. Austin is predeceased by Yvonne (Mrs. Doug Pritchard) and John Allan. Her daughter, Dorelle Baker, still

During her lifetime, Mrs. Austin saw many changes in the village which was always to be her home. Her family was among the first settlers in the area resides in the house.

As well as her involvement with the Red Cross, Mrs. Austin was very active in her church, St. George's Anglican Church in Haliburton. She was a member of the A.C.W. and until a few years ago, sang in the choir.

At the time of writing, funeral arrangements were as yet unknown. But it can be assured there will be many people wanting to extend their sympathy to the family and pay their last respects to such a well-known resident.

Sewer line project still lost in red tape

by LEN PIZZERY

Editor

Hopes for a resort sewer line in Haliburton continue to be ground down under the slowly revolving wheels of bureaucracy.

With engineering work completed, a funding commitment from the province still in place, and the majority of resort owners prepared to fund their portion of the line, the last major hurdle is environment ministry approval of water quality study by consultants Totten Sims Hubicki that will indicate if the existing sewage plant can be expanded and more treated effluent pumped into the Lake Kashagawigamog chain.

The consultants report was based on tests conducted last fall. It was submitted to the MOE for comment, and a revised copy was submitted

February 15. To date there has been no indication of the revisions are acceptable.

If approval does not come soon, it may not be possible to tender the project for a construction start this year. That will almost certainly lead to a new round of cost escalation, that could jeopardize the entire project, which already is expected to cost more than $6 million to complete.

Correction

In a cutline in last week's edition, it was said that a car/bus accident involved Diane Dron and Trevor Thurston. Mrs. Dron and Mr. Thurston, who is a bus driver, did have an accident that day on York Street, but it was not the accident shown in the picture. The caption should have read that the bus driver was Anna Mae Lee and the driver of the car was Joan Sawyer.

The Echo regrets the error.

Chemical scare is nothing new to organic gardener

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

EVERY NOW AND THEN there's a scare over pesticides or poisonous chemicals that sends some people looking for alternative sources of fibre.

Last week the Canadian government issued an embargo on Chilean fruits and vegetables following a threat that produce would be poisoned by Chilean leftist guerillas.

Before that U.S. researchers expressed fear that a chemical used on apples may cause cancer in as many as one in every 4,200 children.

Most people cringe when they first hear the reports, but continue to crunch once the media coverage dies down. After all, an apple a day keeps the doctor away. Doesn't it?

Wilberforce resident Bill Jeffrey has his doubts.

Despite his nurse's insistence that he eat more fruits and vegetables and lose some weight, Jeffrey likes to make up his own mind over what's healthy. An avid reader of Harrowsmith magazine, Jeffrey has followed the stories on poisoned veggies for years. And he takes them to heart.

"I'd rather be buried with a hump in my coffin than eat the fruits and vegetables you get in a store," says Jeffrey. "The very thought of eating all those chemicals just turns my stomach."

And many people have tried to make Jeffrey change his mind.

"They tell me, 'you can't be like that. You're old, chemicals aren't going to bother you.'"

"But I feel better knowing I'm not getting any chemicals."

To some, Jeffrey doesn't seem like the type to putter around the backyard with a trowel and rake. He worked at Union Carbide for 34 years, and says the experience taught him a lot about chemicals.

So, Jeffrey has been tending an organic garden for two years now. Among other goodies, he grows blueberries, apples, cauliflowers, turnips, cabbages, lettuce, carrots, celery, kohlrabi and potatoes. He also grows herbs, such as parsley and basil — and lots of garlic for his blood pressure.

"A few years ago I had a stroke, and I was in pretty bad shape," says Jeffrey. "But I've been eating lots of garlic mixed with brewer's yeast. It tastes awful, but it has caused a significant drop in my blood pressure."

Jeffrey also mixes garlic with brewer's yeast to feed his two dogs — he says it keeps the fleas off.

"You can do so much with herbal remedies," he says. "It pays to get a book and learn about it."

And Jeffrey uses herbs to keep pests away from his garden. He says a tea made from boiled cedar bows can be sprayed as a natural pesticide. "Basil spray will work too, but they didn't work on the

'I feel better knowing I'm not getting any chemicals,' Bill Jeffrey says of why organic gardening is so important to him. 'They call store produce fresh but it's six months old. If it was natural, it wouldn't be edible by now. I don't doubt there's some way for big-time farmers to use organic methods' cabbage worms. I'll have to find something different for them."

Perhaps he'll try putting pantyhose legs over the cabbage. He also suggests putting socks over your corn to keep squirrels away.

Pieces of fat hang in a basket to attract nature's pest controllers, woodpeckers, to eat larvae.

And Jeffrey says growing garlic with your fuchsia will keep aphids away, while molasses and vinegar will kill other unwanted bugs. But the ladybug is a boon to a garden. They eat fruit flies, "and make a nice pet," he says.

Last summer Jeffrey rigged up a piece of glass painted yellow on one side and hung it from a tree over a basin filled with oil. The color yellow attract potato bugs, and he says they "just flew right into the glass, one after the other." After the bugs are collected in oil, Jeffrey burned them, a trick he learned from his father.

But if the yellow glass doesn't work this summer, he'll try sprinkling wheat bran on his potato leaves — but that's not to detract the bugs.

"Potato bugs just love to eat up wheat bran," Jeffrey explains. "They just eat it all until they blow up, just like a stick of dynamite."

Jeffrey admits it would be difficult for a farmer to put socks on several acres of corn.

"But I don't doubt that there's some way for big-time farmers to use some organic methods," he says.

"I know farmers. I've lived with farmers. And some don't give a damn what they sell," says Jeffrey. "I know a man who keeps two cows chemical-free for his family. The rest he sells."

Jeffrey says he doesn't go out of his way to buy "natural" meat. And he has a surplus of canned goods — most loaded with MSG — in the basement across from his winter lettuce and seedlings.

"Some things I eat because I have no choice," he says. "I've eaten out of the stores, but I really prefer not to."

In the summer Jeffrey fishes and hunts. He pulls a package of venison from the freezer.

"That's the best organic meat you can get," he says. "The rest you've got to take it as you can get it."

Jeffrey points to a pile of rotting apples in his yard. "You look at that, and then look at the red, shiny apples you find in a store. The only reason why you can eat those is that they're loaded with chemicals and coated with wax — the same stuff you use on your car, and it can't be excreted."

"They call store produce fresh, but it's six months old. If it was natural, it wouldn't be edible by now."

Jeffrey says he worries about what will happen in the world he is leaving his seven grandchildren.

"They'll have to become immune to pesticides in order to survive," he says. "Their whole food chain is poisoned. No matter what you feed your kids, there's chemicals in it. They'll have to start living like cockroaches."

Jeffrey concedes that his garden isn't wholly

Garden was a necessity for many in the old days

organic, and says that it may be an impossible task. "When they spray the roads it gets over all the farms," he says. "You just can't get away from this stuff."

"How can they spray corn with alachlor and then feed it to the cattle, and then call it organic? Now come on."

"There's got to be changes and changes fast, or else I don't know what will happen for our children."

Jeffrey says that if one farmer sprays, his neighbor will be affected. Even hydro poles, car exhaust and road salt can make a difference. And, he says many farmers have poisoned their own wells with chemicals sprays.

"Unless everyone starts to cut back, then you can't do organic gardening," he says. "It's out of control. You can only do the best you can, but you can't be 100 per cent organic."

Jeffrey says that anyone who wants to start an organic garden has three strikes against him. Most seeds are treated with chemicals, many potting soils have a chemical base and the land you garden on might have been an oil dump 20 years ago.

He keeps his own seeds from the fruits and vegetables he eats, but some seeds must be purchased. Although some companies are offering untreated seed, due to public demand, many are coated with chemicals.

Jeffrey opens a bag of fava beans and reveals large seeds covered in an unappetizing coat of fluorescent pink chemicals.

A warning on the bag's label states, 'Poisonous to Man, Animals and Birds.' But Jeffrey needs the fava beans because they put nitrogen into the soil.

"If your seeds already have fungicide on them, how the heck are you going to grow organically? You really have to watch everyone you do."

And some potting soils are composed of rotted shavings from wood that was treated with PCP, says Jeffrey.

"Compost is anything that will decay and rot, they don't care what it is," he says. "Then, if you grow your vegetables in that soil, those chemicals go right into your food chain."

Jeffrey says he used to love nothing more than grabbing a fork and eating pork and beans right out of the can. "But even that can of beans is going to have chemicals all over it."

Jeffrey began gardening as a child. "Mom always had a rose garden," he says.

"My wife and I had three kids, so sometimes it was a necessity, because that's what I fed the kids on. Life was never easy, so I always grew my own vegetables."

"But now I feel I have to do it, even if it's just as an example for my kids and grandkids. Things have got to change."

There's got to be changes, and changes fast, or else I don't know what will happen for our children,' says Mr. Jeffrey. He changed his ways two years ago by going to organic gardening

County silences irate truckers Museum requests $67,765 grant

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Because of problems with irate truck drivers, the county has written a new policy into its by-law "for the purpose of regulating the hiring of trucks by the County of Haliburton Roads Department."

Section (h) of the new by-law reads: "No verbal complaints from truck owners are to be entertained by council, committee members, the engineer's office or the answering service. Any complaints must be in writing to the Road Committee. Persistent unfounded complaints will result in removal from employment for one year."

If a truck company wants to be hired out by the county, its name is put on a list, providing the company meets all the other requirements in the by-law. Then, when the roads department needs a driver, it phones dispatcher Marg Young who then phones the top company on the list.

The companies are then rotated to ensure there's no favouritism.

"If you owned a truck and you didn't feel you were being treated fairly, it got to be a shouting match between Marg Young and the trucker," says clerk-treasurer Gary McKnight of why this clause was added. "She was taking a little abuse and she's not hired to do that."

Another change to the policy was made in order to preclude any problems. Section (i) now reads: "No owner shall allow a vehicle to be driven by an improperly licensed operator. If it is found that an operator is not properly licensed, none of the owner's vehicles will be allowed to work for the county for a period of one year."

"We're trying to stop any problem before it starts," says McKnight. As an example, he said he used to be an ambulance driver and had a license which allowed him to drive any type of vehicle. After heart surgery, he voluntarily changed his license qualifications to reflect his health condition. Not all drivers would do that.

"We want to make sure we're covered," McKnight said.

The Haliburton Highlands Museum wants 11 percent more money from Dysart et al council than the municipality provided last year.

On Monday, museum director Tom Ballantine asked council for a grant of $67,765 as part of a total budget of $96,115. The balance of the money would come from admission receipts, operating grants from the province, student employment grants, and other minor sources.

Last year, Dysart's contribution was $60,000 to a total museum budget of $94,258.

Ballantine said the budget increase was attributable mainly to higher maintenance costs for the main museum building, and proposed major repairs to the Reid house, the chimney of which must be repaired. He estimated that work would cost $3000.

On the positive side, Ballantine said attendance reached a record 4,400 last year, and he anticipates an even greater number of visitors this year. To help cope with the influx, the 1989 budget includes money for more student help for the Reid House and main museum, Ballantine said.

Other costs in the budget are within the rate of inflation, Ballantine told council.

Reeve Murray Fearrey questioned Ballantine's claim that the municipal grant request represented an increase of 11 percent of council's contribution in 1988, Fearrey said last year's grant included $6,500 for capital expenditures that are not repeated in the 1989 numbers, and when those costs are considered, the actual increase is more like 20 percent.

Ballantine maintained his position that in actual dollars, the increase in the requested grant from Dysart was slightly less than 11 percent.

Council took the museum budget request under advisement, and will consider it in more detail when they prepare the 1989 municipal budget, probably next month.

Study probes expansion at board of education

by LEN PIZZEY
Editor

The Haliburton County Board of Education will ask an architect to do a preliminary study for an expansion to its offices.

At a meeting February 7, the board's special projects committee recommended that architect Norm Critchley of the firm Critchley, Delaine, Trussler and Evans, who designed a new library resource centre to be built at Haliburton high school this year, be asked to study the possibility of adding more space to the board office, which was built in 1979.

The committee also directed administrative staff to do a review to determine if hiring an additional person would relieve a problem in handling the present staff workload.

Skaters shine at Circus of the Stars

Costumes, choreography— and talent—make the show

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

CENTRE STAGE of Saturday night's Circus of the Stars might have been the Monmouth Arena, but had this carnival on ice taken place in Madison Square Gardens, you couldn't have seen a prouder group of figure skaters.

Lions, and tigers and bears, oh yes—approximately 65 of them took to the ice in the annual figure skating carnival. With wonderful costumes sewn by mothers and grandmothers, and fancy moves choreographed by instructor Andrea Donaldson, the arena did resemble a chilly but exciting big top.

Ringmaster Harry Clarke introduced the skaters whose uniform steps opened the carnival. Angie Waugh, Jodi Barker, May-Anne Jordens, ReNee Casey, Cheri Tremblett, Tanya Bowers, Julie Park, Jennifer Dunford, Jennifer Coumbs, Meghan Agnew, Karen Chatterton and Andrea Donaldson took to the ice with All Over the World adding bounce to their steps.

Karen Chatterton was not soon off the ice when she reappeared as the Big Bear leading Little Bears Tracey Nottage, Amy Davidson, Julie Walsh, Lisa Finlay, Crystal Alden, Sheena Horning and Shannon Switzer in The Bare Necessities.

Not to have anyone be belied by her costume, Karen then performed a solo number which allowed her to shine all on her own.

Every circus must have its clowns, and in Wilberforce, perennial jokesters Angie Waugh and Jodi Barker fit the bill perfectly. Their antics delighted the audience as well as the children who appreciated the candies thrown into the packed bleachers.

The coach's younger sister and former guest performer, Abby Burk, was next to demonstrate the gracefulness young women can achieve on skates. Doing a number of leaps and turns, she ably proved that practice makes perfect.

The audience needed to stretch its imagination a little for the next number but some delightful costumes helped. When I See an Elephant Fly was performed by Tanya Bowers, Julie Park, Thera Simioni, Krista Watson, Cindy Vaughan and Shiloe Coty.

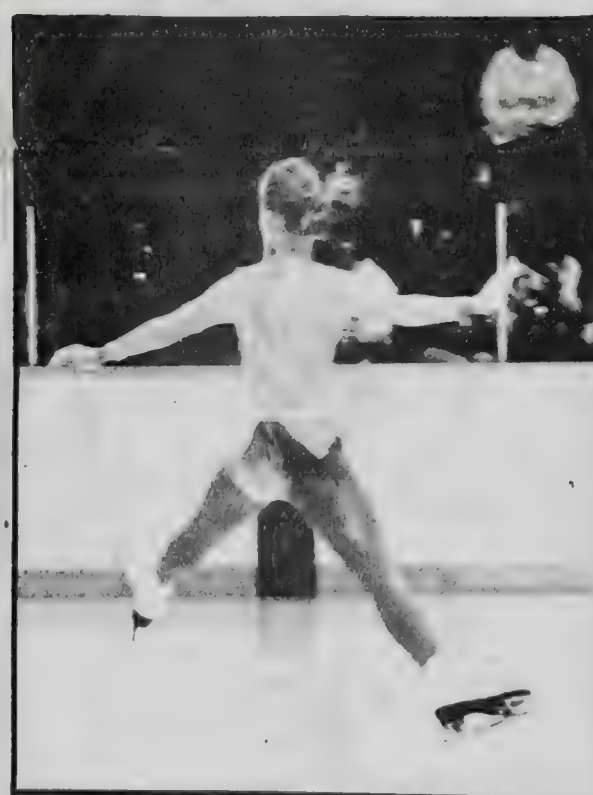

Two of the elephants were back for the first duet of the evening, performed with skill by Tanya Bowers and Julie Park.

For the first time, the next group of skaters taking to the ice proved that it's the young at heart who enjoy figure skating, not just the young. Adult skaters Andrea Donaldson, Angie Bronson, Anne Alden, Linda Pockett, Mary Hiltz, and Kim Covert skated with synchronized rhythm and flare in The Tango.

Skaters deserve applause in display of rhythm, flare

The surprise turned out to be two gangly apes whose attempts to play golf/baseball touched the funny bone of many audience members. They were joined on the ice by the Harcourt Hurricane Dog.

Everybody Wants to be a Cat, the next skaters informed everyone. Prowling across the ice were Angie Waugh, Jodi Barker, May-Anne Jordens, ReNee Casey, Cherie Tremblett, Tanya Bowers, Julie Park, Jennifer Dunford, Jennifer Coumbs, Meghan Agnew, Karen Chatterton and Andrea Donaldson.

The third soloist was Melanie Duchane who pranced through moves with feline grace to the tune of Stray Cat Strut.

Who says figure skating can't be macho? That's the question the young male skaters asked as they flexed their muscles while skating to the theme from Rocky. Jesse Packard, Kenny Ablett, Jay Nottage, Ben Barker, Dennis Mangan and Kevin Jordens showed that skating isn't sissy stuff.

From brawn to beauty: Guest skater Danielle

LaRue was outstanding in her thrilling performance. With confidence and a ballerina's sense of dance, she leapt and glided across the ice in a way that had the audience clapping many times during her number.

Fun and frivolity came next with A Tiger by the Tail, featuring ReNee Casey as the Big Tiger and the sure-footed little tigers of Chasity Rogers, Melanie Anderson, Sara Olszewski, Sandra Riley, Patti Riley, Stacey Finney and Katie Mangan.

The young skaters then took a few hesitant steps off the ice and let ReNee perform her solo about The Wonderful Thing About Tiggers.

Still in the clown costumes but a bit more serious, Angie Waugh and Jodi Barker showed that behind the funny moves there was also much skating talent.

Kathy Walsh was home from college where she has kept up with her figure skating since leaving the area. Her talent has been given time to grow and she gave an accomplished solo performance.

The audience then watched out for May-Anne Jordens, Cherie Tremblett, Cassandra Packard, Melanie Webster, Michelle Anderson and Laura Fideau in the number called Danger Zone.

The two older skaters—May-Anne and Cherie—then stayed on the ice for an exciting duet full of dance moves and jumps.

Lion tamer Jennifer Dunford tried to keep order on the ice when King Lion Jennifer Coumbs and Little Lions Katharine Anderson, Misty Bordnik, Melissa Finney, Sandra Dunford and Tanya Watson joined her. After the Little Lions retreated, the two Jennifers had a fun time with their duet.

There was even a little monkey business at the carnival. Meghan Agnew, Joni Erickson, Jill Erickson, Melissa Olszewski, Asia Mangan, Jennifer Watson, Meggy Pay, Mandy Fideau and Brandy Woodcox came on to the tune of Hey, Hey, We're the Monkeys.

Meghan Agnew was the youngest solo skater and her performance showed great promise for future carnivals.

To top everything off, the carnival brought in The A Team—the sisterly duo of Abby Burk and Andrea Donaldson. Their sheer enjoyment of skating together was obvious both by the looks on their faces and by the way they confidently approached each move.

So when all the skaters took to the ice for one last curtain call, the audience certainly had a lot to show their appreciation for.

Teen blossoms by working with seniors

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

MOST RESIDENTS at Hyland Crest Senior Citizens' Home treasure the attention of friends and family who come to visit.

But many residents don't consider how meaningful their company can be to a visitor, particularly if the visits are part of a school curriculum.

Fourteen-year-old student Tanya Allaire waits anxiously each week to volunteer at Hyland Crest as part of a new "visitation program" started by teacher Bernie Davis at Archie Stouffer Public School.

Since December, Tanya has been visiting the home Friday mornings and Saturday afternoons. And, she says, going back to school on Friday just isn't the same.

"When I come back to school in the afternoon I feel really good about myself," she says. "I go back and try to accomplish everything."

Each Friday morning, Tanya helps adjuvant Linda English and activities director Doris Robertson with Fun And Fitness.

"We play music and do gentle exercises," says Tanya. "We do arm and leg exercises. And for those with arthritis we have them open and close their fists. We also bounce a hula-hoop around to the music."

And what type of music do the residents listen to while exercising?

"We play all sorts of country music," Tanya says, "but mostly Randy Travis."

English and Robertson are impressed with how Tanya's work with the residents has improved.

"She's really doing well," says English. "At first she was sort of shy. But she seems to have won the residents' hearts here."

Robertson appreciates any volunteers, but Tanya has managed to find a special place in her heart.

"She visits the lonely. On our days off she makes herself available and organizes the tea parties."

"She's here when I'm not here," says Robertson. "And she's really willing to do anything, it doesn't matter what you ask her to do."

Robertson adds that Tanya had a problem supervising card games with the seniors on Saturday afternoons — apparently some of the residents get riled while playing euchre, and Tanya wasn't sure how to stop the fights.

At first Tanya didn't tell anyone about the problem.

"I think she was afraid to tell me because she thought she might not be able to stay," the activities co-ordinator says.

So she switched to bingo, and the problem was solved.

"She doesn't usually get upset easily," says Robertson. "She really wants to understand the peo-

PEOPLE

Volunteer work is difficult, but often very rewarding

ple she works with. She tries hard to understand. "She's come a long way since she started."

An abundance of patience

After Fun And Fitness, Tanya serves tea and coffee to the residents. She can take orders better than many waitresses — and with more patience. Sometimes coffee can be confused with tea, and there are some residents who are quick to complain. Like one woman, who shouted "I never drink coffee in the morning" after receiving her drink.

"It makes me feel really out of place if someone wants to fight," says Tanya. "If I have an argument I try not to think about it. It's just that some people can't be satisfied."

Tanya understands that many of the residents find it frustrating to be so dependent on others. And helping the seniors, giving and receiving affection, helps to ease the frustrations of being a teenager.

"When I come here it's not as complicated as being at school with other kids," she says. "They treat you with respect if you respect them."

Robertson says Tanya makes it obvious that she loves volunteering at Hyland Crest.

"She'll phone and say, 'are you sure you don't need me Thursday.' But I feel like we're keeping her out of school."

After experiencing the rewards of volunteer work at Hyland Crest, Tanya sometimes resents returning to school.

"Sometimes it feels like a waste of time doing school-work," she says. "There's more interesting work here than in school."

Tanya's special education teacher Bernie Davis understands her frustration, so she tries to gear Tanya's studies by teaching practical skills for entering the work force.

"It's good to build on a student's strengths," says Davis. "Before Christmas, Tanya was helping out at the school office as a secretary."

"She really did a good job of answering the phone, and the better she handled it, the more confident she became, the better she got."

"Instead of churning away at long division, which she'll never use, we teach things she'll really need for a job," says Davis. "We have to give students like Tanya Allaire the opportunity to learn other things."

Davis says Tanya has shown a great deal of maturity since starting the visitation program. After four weeks, she invited one of the residents to her home for supper.

"Her family was all prepared to have a guest, but the lady slipped and had to cancel," says Davis. "Tanya was in a situation where she had to empathize for someone else. She was in a whole different role — she had to be the understanding and mature person."

Learning about work

Through her work at the home, Tanya sees herself as an active person in her community. And she's learning a lot about the working world.

'Instead of churning away at long division, which she'll never use, we teach things she'll really need for jobs,' says teacher Bernie Davis. Tanya says that working at the home makes her 'feel really good inside myself. I don't feel so miserable when I get home because I've accomplished something'

"My mother and father think this is a great experience for when I get older," says Tanya. "I can do most of the things I've tried. My school work is my disability. I've done things here that I'm really good at."

"I was thinking I could get a job here as a nurse or maybe help working in the kitchen someday," she says.

Then Tanya has to excuse herself to help one of the residents, William Moore, pin on a shamrock in preparation for the St. Patrick's Day formal dinner. "My hands aren't so good," he concedes. After Tanya pins on the shamrock, Mr. Moore reaches out for a hug.

"I couldn't get along without her," he says with a grin. "It sure is great when the young kids come in once in awhile. You've no idea how much joy it brings."

And how does Tanya feel about getting hugs and kisses from the men at the home?

"When I come in here I feel that I'm always wanted," she says. "They treat me like I'm their daughter or grand-daughter, and that makes me feel really good."

Tanya admits she felt a little scared when she first came to Hyland Crest. But she has learned to relax.

"When I started I thought, what if something went wrong? I wouldn't know what to do."

But English and Robertson have always offered Tanya support.

"If I have nothing to do, I tell them and they say, 'come with me and we'll find something,'" Tanya says, and adds that they asked her to volunteer on Saturdays, "because they thought I was doing a real nice job on Fridays."

What else has Tanya learned during the visitation program?

"I learned that if you come in here, you're wanted," she says. "You can get along really well with some of the residents."

"Most of the people here understand your problems, and they give you really nice compliments when you deserve them."

"I felt really good inside myself. If I get these nice compliments now, then I'll get better, and I won't feel so miserable when I get home at night because I accomplished something."

Anne of Green Gables still a joy in the reading hour

SENIOR LEAGUE

by Winnifred Barnum

Last Thursday, Minden Curling ladies served us with a tea which we enjoyed very much.

Doris is reading "Anne of Green Gables" to us in our hour of reading. Most of us have read them before, but we are enjoying them again.

The auxiliary ladies had a card part in the auditorium Thursday night and the residents were welcome to attend. Lunch was served following the cards.

After fun and fitness Friday, anyone who wished to go was taken for a short outing in the bus. It was a beautiful day for a drive.

Mrs. Coleman had Bible study for us at 1 o'clock and Pastor Fast showed us nearly 300 slides of two visits he had taken in Israel. They were very interesting and made you realize more clearly what the country is like now and was like before. The Girl Guides from Carnarvon came and put on a program for our entertainment. We appreciated this very much.

Congratulations to Angus Coulter on his 91st birthday

March 10, 1989.

My sister and husband, May and Roy Cameron, their daughter Jacqueline and her granddaughter Melissa from Peterborough came to see me and took me out to dinner Saturday.

Ina McGuire is back from Civic Hospital in Peterborough. She thought she might need an operation, but is very glad she did not.

May Horsley had some of her family and her brother Don and his wife to visit her.

Mr. Burgess took the chapel service Sunday night and he reported his wife Mary Burgess is improving in Lindsay Hospital.

Monday morning Terry and Norma came for me.

We went to Lindsay and had lunch, then to Peterborough to my sisters for dinner. Terry and Norma had dinner with Norma's mother.

There were movies in auditorium Monday night. Afterwards the Highland Dancers entertained us with music and dancing.

Pastor Fast took Tuesday morning Chapel service.

Congratulations to Nancy Walker on the birth of a son March 14, 1989.

Monday afternoon we went for a bus ride to see where deer feed during the winter. We did not see any deer but enjoyed the outing.

We welcome Sylvia and Dick as new volunteers at Hyland Crest.

Paulette Blake presents one of the 500 limited edition plates with the Rails' End Gallery printed on it to Guild president Virginia Muenzel

Work of top local photographers will be featured on collector plates

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Haliburton Village can seem picture perfect and Paulette Blake is hoping to capitalize on both the village's beauty spots and its talented residents by holding a contest to decide which scenes will next grace a limited edition set of collector plates.

Last week, Paulette's Gifts and Collectibles started featuring 500 limited edition plates on which is printed a close-up photograph of the Rails' End Gallery. It is only the first in what is hoped to be a series of five collector's plates.

"The first picture was the most important," Mrs. Blake said as she presented one of the plates to Virginia Muenzel, president of the Guild of Fine Arts. The gallery is one of the most unique and historic buildings in the village and because the Haliburton sign is clearly visible, it sets the tone for the rest of the series.

Before choosing the gallery shot, however, Mrs. Blake looked at other pictures taken by one of the brothers of Schneider Enterprises, which makes the plate. The Highlander train could be sitting anywhere and hydro lines obscured the historic value of the town hall. Now it's up to local photographers to find the next perfect shots. Their names will be printed on the back of each plate, along with a description of the scene.

The contest is limited to pictures of Haliburton Village and hopeful participants are asked to take their pictures to Mrs. Blake at the store, preferably cut into circles so she can better judge how they will look on a plate.

COBOCONK NEWS

by Sheila Lake

Winners in the Coboconk Seniors card games on March 14 were as follows. Euchre: ladies', Frieda Boyce 69, Thelma Watson 68; most lone hands: Frieda Boyce 3; consolation: Elva Hannivan 50; Gents: Stan Stewart 76, Tom Bowins 73; most lone hands: John Bulton 5; consolation, Peter Nykyforiak 45; Bridge: ladies: Myra Dyon 5870, Jean Shields 3480; Gents: Joyce Thompson 4380, Jack Sim 3950.

A teacher at Coboconk Public School, Bill Davidson, who was the Science Fair organizer at the school, found his job as a judge very difficult. The Coboconk Science Fair was held March 10 at the Lions Hall.

Lisa Russell and Cindy Angiers had "volcano", a lampshade covered in paper mache, and realistic looking lava, which was really tomato paste.

Holly McBean and Todd Callan were curious to know if a person can learn in his sleep. They tested each other by playing taped children's stories, music and long stories while one slept. Their experiment taught them that music could not be remembered, a long story could be partly remembered, and with a children's story there could be a dream related to the tape. Todd and Holly concluded they did not learn as much as they had expected.

While all the students really gave their project a lot of work, as usual, there can only be a few winners and the rest go unmentioned.

Winners in the junior division were: First—Mike Wynstakers and Colleen Munro for their insulation project; Second—Jacquie Luff and Victoria Fildey for "Respiration"; Third—Mike Dinwoodie and Mike Bell with "Eclipses"; Novice Winners—Jim Herd, first for paper making; Melanie Foster took second place for moulds; Mike Watson and Jeffrey Chynoweth placed third for paper recycling.

With a deep love for science, perhaps one or more of these students will be the David Suzuki of the future. Sincere sympathy to you Mary Jordan, in your recent bereavement.

The Norland United Church Women met on February 14 in the church hall. Marilyn Wille opened with a reading about Valentine's Day, which started in 270 AD. A song, "People of Power" was sung and the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison. Roll call was answered by 10 members. Minutes of January meeting were read and approved. The programmes for 1989 were discussed.

The scripture reading was Proverbs 21 verses 1-11. Violet Gostlin held a contest on Scripture anatomy, won by Roth

Serene mute swan spotted

KINMOUNT NEWS

by Millie Moss

Mr. Thurston, principal of Norland Public School, would like to share a poem with you which he believes summarizes the kind of partnership he has experienced at the Norland School. The author is unknown and the poem is called "Unity".

I dreamed I stood in a studio / And watched two sculptors there / The clay they used was a young child's mind / And they fashioned it with care / One was a teacher—the tools he used / Were books, music and art / The other, a parent, worked with a guiding hand / And a gentle, loving heart / Day after day, the teacher worked with touch / That was deft and sure / While the parent standing by his side / Polished and smoothed it o'er / And when at last their task was done / They were proud of what they had wrought / For the things they had moulded into the child / Could neither be sold nor bought / And each agreed they would have failed / If each had worked alone / For behind the teacher stood the school / And behind the parent, the home.

For those of you interested in the Meals on Wheels Program in this area you may call Convenor Tony Dymott at 488-2815.

Results of the Kinmount Seniors Railroad Station Drop-In Centre, seventeen players of euchre on Thursday, March 9: ladies' high, Ruby Holbrook who also held most lone hands; ladies' low, Margaret Kylie; men's high, Charlie Henderson; men's low, Peter Nykyforiak.

St. James Kinmount euchre results for Tuesday evening, March 14: ladies' high, Violet Cooke; ladies' low, Margaret Kylie; men's high, Arnold Schroeter who also held the most lone hands; and men's low, Esther Graham. I'm told most of these players had quite a time getting home because of that very bad storm in our area that evening. We turned off highway 35 onto 503 toward Kinmount and ran into patches of ground fog. Between the flashes of lightning, everything was absolutely black. Then I spotted flames back from the road on the south side just west from Bob Cooper's house. We drove on until we came to Ron Newman's home where I called firemen. We couldn't tell if it was a forest fire or premises burning but at least the alarm had been turned in.

From there we drove very slowly home and when we got to Highway 121 we saw the Kinmount firetrucks, lights flashing. We were told Norland firemen were at the scene. Since then I've learned no one was hurt, the place was vacant at the time, and had burned to floor level by the time help arrived so all they could do was let it burn itself out. It was a very old building called the "Rover Cabin" at Camp Endobanah and for many years home to boy scouts et al of St. Clements Church in Toronto. It was a happy place and will hold many good memories, erased by a stroke of lightning and gone in a very short while.

Nora Bryant of Norland was the winner of the Norland Volunteer Firefighter's Hockey Pool Saturday, March 11.

Recent visitors at the home of Mary and John Pyke in Norland included Betty Davey, Irene Bartley and Helen Graham, all of Norland and Philip Card of Newmarket who also visited at the home of Helen Graham.

St. James A.C.W. in Kinmount celebrated their annual St. Patrick's luncheon/bake table on March 11 at the church hall which was decorated beautifully for the occasion. The attendance was down somewhat from other years because that was the day of another big storm. Even so, there were many brave souls who wouldn't miss out St. Patrick's event. Thanks to all who came and to everyone who contributed in any way.

Donna Stroud and Bill Moss Jr. spotted a mute swan swimming in open water at the left side of Highway 118 near West Guilford recently. Donna said probably no one would believe it was a mute swan because they are not usually found in these parts, but luckily she had her camera and binoculars along.

She said the swan was serenely swimming very close to where she and Bill stood until they were spotted and then the bird went into a threatening position with wings held up and out from his body in a very distinct manner. It seemed to be protecting a possible hidden mate and as he swam away he was heard to make a sort of grunt and climbing onto some ice began preening himself. Donna says she couldn't believe the size of his big black feet and legs as he got out of the water. A further description was a large, deep orange beak, black knob above his nasal openings and black extending back from beak to under his eyes. The rest of his body was white.

(Editor's note: All potential fairy tale writers are reminded of a contest being sponsored by the Haliburton County Echo, The Haliburton County Library, Master's Book Store and Patrick Books. The contest is open to anyone in the county and the story must have something to do with the swan. The contest deadline is the last Friday in April. Entrants may be mailed to the Echo office at Box 360, Haliburton, K0M 1S0.)

On another day, Donna Stroud and her trusty camera were busy at the back of her own place which goes down to the river. There were some men obviously up from the city for some fun and they were keeping busy pushing a boat load of their gear across the ice of the river to a cottage on the other side. After a few crossings, Donna and Bill got a conversation going with them. Before the day was done, Donna snapped pictures of three of the men who finally went through the ice. One of them to his shoulders. He had to be helped back to his cottage for a change of cloths. Another should be thankful he didn't break a leg when he went through to his hip. Just the week before, a dog was left behind by "The angel said to the women, 'Do not be afraid, for I know that you are looking for Jesus, who was crucified. He is not here; he has risen, just as he said.' Matthew 28:5-6

Alleluia! There is joy in the resurrection and soon we will see new life in our plants after the snow melts. Here are some "especially for Easter breads". Thank you all who say they read my column. I appreciate your support.

HOT CROSS BUNS

2 pkgs. or 2 tbsp. yeast
1/3 cup water
1/3 cup milk, scalded
1/2 cup salad oil or melted shortening
1/3 cup sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
3-1/2 to 4 cups flour
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
3 beaten eggs
2/3 cup currants
1 slightly beaten egg white
Icing Sugar

Soften yeast in warm water. Combine milk, oil, sugar and salt; cool to lukewarm. Mix together 1 cup of the flour and the cinnamon; stir into milk mixture. Add eggs; beat well. Stir in softened yeast and currants. Add remaining flour and a little more or less and knead until a soft dough. Cover with damp cloth and let rise in warm place until double (1-1/2 hours). Punch down. Roll to 1/2 inch on lightly floured surface. Cut in rounds with 2-1/2 inch cutter; shape into buns. Place on greased baking sheet about 1-1/2 inches apart. Cover and let rise until double (1 hour). Cut a shallow cross in each bun with a knife. Brush tops with eggwhite. Bake at 375 degrees for 12 minutes or until done. Add icing sugar to remaining egg white and use as a frosting to fill in crosses on warm buns. Makes about 2 dozen.

EASTER BRAID

1 pkg. yeast or 1 tbsp.
1/2 cup water
1 cup milk, scalded
1/2 cup sugar
1 tsp. salt
1/2 cup softened margarine
4-1/2 to 5 cups flour
2 eggs
2 tsp. grated lemon peel
1/4 tsp. mace
1 cup raisins
Sugar Glaze

Soften yeast in warm water with 1 tsp. sugar. Combine milk, sugar, salt and butter; cool to lukewarm. Stir in about 2 cups of the flour; add eggs and mix well. Stir in softened yeast. Add lemon peel, mace, the raisins and remaining flour to make a soft dough. Let rest 10 minutes. Knead on lightly floured surface until smooth and elastic. Place in lightly greased bowl, turning once to grease surface. Cover and let rise in warm place until double (1-1/2 hours). Punch down; let rise until double (1 hour). Divide into 2 balls; one for each loaf. Let rest, covered 10 minutes. For each loaf divide one ball into fourths. Shape 3 parts into strands 12 inches long, braid loosely on lightly greased baking sheet without stretching dough. Seal ends well. Divide remaining dough into thirds. Shape into strands 8-9 inches long. Braid loosely and place atop large braid, tucking ends of small braid into large one. Cover and let rise until double. Bake loaves at 350 degrees for 25-30 minutes. While warm, spread with glaze: 2 cups icing sugar mixed with 1/4 cup hot water and 1 tsp. butter. Drizzle over 2 loaves.

Tenders on highway means crash helmets can be retired

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by Marian Donovan

The circus came to town in Wilberforce on Saturday night as the skating club thrilled its audience with "Circus of the Stars". Approximately 65 skaters entertained the full-to-capacity arena with all the excitement of the big top as ring-master Harry Clarke introduced the acts.

Lions, tigers and elephants cut a dash with their trainers while two talented clowns, Angie Waugh and Jodi Barker kept the audience amused by their antics between acts. They also got lots of participation from the watching children when they tossed candy to the crowd.

Soloists Karen Chatterton, Abby Burk, Melanie Duchane, ReNeCasey, Kathy Walsh and Meghan Agnew all performed beautifully, with duet skaters Tany Bowers and Julie Park, Angie Waugh and Jodi Barker, May-Anne Jordens and Cherie Tremblett, Jennifer Dunford and Jennifer Coumbs all showing us how very skilled combination skating can be.

In all it was a wonderful show and the thanks of everyone to Andrea Donaldson who put in many long hours in a cold rink to bring out the best in the children.

Thanks also to guest speaker Danielle LaRue of Haliburton Skating Club for her beautiful, fluid performance. I'm sure she was a great inspiration to all the young skaters.

Tenders are out for the reconstruction of Highway 648. They say the squeaky wheel gets the oil, so maybe all our cries did not fall on deaf ears. Right now the bumps we just got used to, now have holes in front of them so be sure and take your sea sick pills and wear your seat belt. A crash helmet would help too.

I hate to be picky, but I just want to clarify that the Donovans don't own any horses and to my knowledge there is no one named Orville Donovan. Also my husband Jim and I have never been to Florida and have no wish to go. So the story by staff reporter, Susan Grober is a little out of context.

Faye Watson and Sulo Soper held the high score for Euchre at Highland Grove on Monday night. Most lone hands went to Ida Holmes and Bob Stevenson. The low score to Annie Rowley and Warren Bowen with the travelling prize to Gilbert Rowley.

Bridge is held every Tuesday night at Tory Hill in the Monmouth Recreation Centre. Last weeks winner was Vic Mathews of Wilberforce. Second place to Vi Aikman of Haliburton and third prize to Ida Holmes of Wilberforce. The consolation prize was awarded to Ross Agnew of Wilberforce.

So far March has lived up to its reputation for a mixed bag of weather. From nearly spring days to downpours of rain and wind and then "surprise". Freezing temperatures and lots of centimetres of snow. When the freeze-up began it was a motorists nightmare. I was lucky and only ended up in a snow bank, but there were lots of people who met with trees or other vehicles which are not so forgiving. One last vote of thanks to all our road crews who always do such a wonderful job. When we are all snug in our beds or by the fire with a good book, the lads are out there. Thanks again to you all.

A note from Andrea Donaldson, the coach of the Wilberforce figure skating club:

"I would like to extend my appreciation to the executives, parents, skaters (both kids and adults) and to the arena staff, for all their support throughout the year. I would also like to thank guest skaters Daniella LaRue, Kathy Walsh, the two Gorillas and the Harcourt Hurricane Dog. A special thanks to Leitha's Sweets and Treats of Minden, and the local businesses, Agnews Red and White, Wilberforce I.G.A. and Schwandt's Lumber for their donations. Thanks again for an excellent year."

Snowed-out success

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by Eleanor Cooper

Congratulations to Darren, son of Norma and Ray Sisson on his forthcoming marriage to Debbie Bradley. There will be a wedding dance on April 8, a week after the wedding in Ottawa. Darren is still with Canadian Armed Forces and is being transferred to Edmonton, a three-year posting.

The St. Patrick's Day concert on Friday evening turned into a party for about 26 people. Those who were able to attend had a wonderful evening of entertainment. A sing-along of Irish songs was led by Jack Mavor at first then by Wayne Cooper. Jack was part of the Highlands Country Band, along with Ian Craig at keyboard, Earl Cooper on fiddle, Ken Walsh on drum, and Brian Sachs on accordion.

It was impossible to tune the instrument to the sadly out-of-tune piano, so Kathleen Owens did not supply the usual chording accompaniment. Instead she and Wayne played a piano duet later. Wayne and Jack each provided solos.

Dancers demonstrated three dances, the most difficult and the most entertaining being "The Irish Rover". (We were to have had the Line Dancers from the Haliburton County Services as well, but the weather and roads prevented this). Thanks to the Scottish Country Dancers and all who provided the fun for us.

Cindy Rodley officiated at the table with receipts for the donations to Red Cross which was the reason for the event. Approximately $160 was raised at the time. People stayed to enjoy refreshments provided. Thanks to the Chumbley girls and Erma Sisson for their assistance in this regard.

Guilford residents are welcome to attend St. Peter's church at 7:30 on April 5 when Julie Gray and Rose Barry will present their slides and talk on their trip to and from the Honduras.

Bryant. A sword drill was held and Ella Giffin was the winner. Ella Giffin moved that the $100 of allocation money be sent to M&S and keep the $25 quarterly for mission work in the church and community. This was seconded by Joyce Bartley. The benediction and grace were sung and Joyce Bartley served lunch.

March 9 card games in the Norland Seniors saw Ziggy Kwasnick high with 58 and Ziggy also had two lone hands. Low score was Ken Reesor with 36. Vera Brown was high for the ladies with a score of 61. Gene Crisp had 2 lone hands and Mary McShane had low score with 37. Lucky draw winners were Mary McShane, Dorothy Brown and John Button.

Peter Dewell, son of Wayne and Etta Dewell was literally knocked off his snowmobile by a partridge recently. Now Peter is a big husky young man of 18 or so but the bird flew at his head and he was knocked off his machine out near Wayne Downes'. Poor bird died of a broken neck—Peter was just shook up.

Every man has a right to his opinion, but no man has a right to be wrong in his facts.

Did you see the Northern Lights around 10 p.m. last Monday night? They were apparently seen as far away as Texas. When one looks up into the sky, how can one doubt that God created such a vast area, and He created the beautiful coloured waves we saw last week? How sad that our atmosphere is so polluted with chemicals, gases and smoke. Each of us should try and keep our great earth free of such substances that destroy.

THE HEART FACTS

Q. What are some of the major signs of a heart attack?

A. Physical signs include chest discomfort, fatigue, nausea, sweating and shortness of breath. The most important factor to watch out for is a psychological one, denial—not admitting that you could be having a heart attack. If you have any of these symptoms, you should tell someone and seek help right away. It could save your life!

Your Business

In the interest of enhancing the business climate in the Highlands, the Haliburton County Development Corporation is pleased to sponsor this informative business-oriented column. The material in this report was prepared by the Small Business Branch of the Ontario Ministry of Industry, Trade and Technology.

UNDERSTANDING YOUR CASH FLOW

A company's books may look dull, but what they portray is a living, breathing and dynamic entity called a business.

This business is run by people who have to make hundreds of decisions daily about the products and services they offer, the prices to be charged and how the company's money should be spent.

This dynamic process of controlling revenues and expenditures is called "managing cash flow". Cash flow, for a small business, can be loosely defined as "sales minus operating costs".

"And if your cash flow is negative, you definitely have a pricing problem," says one small business consultant.

"If you can't sell your product or service at a good enough price to at least cover your basic operating costs, you should seriously reassess your business."

The message is simple: watching and managing your cash flow is crucial to the success of your business and some time should be set aside at the end of each month to perform this task and make the necessary changes.

Managing cash flow requires complete and accurate information, and the primary source of this information is the "monthly summary of income" statement.

A classic monthly income statement is made up of the following categories: gross profit (sales minus the cost of goods sold). After determining gross profit, variable and fixed expenses should be determined. The first category of expenses are the ones that change every month, such as advertising, gas, travel and office supplies. The second category of expenses are the ones that stay constant month after month, such as rent, salaries, depreciation and bank interest. Finally, the month's total expenses are subtracted from the gross profits and that number will determine if there is a net profit or loss for the month—the proverbial bottom line.

Since the monthly income statement breaks down all the different expenses and revenues, it is easy to track the company's changing financial fortunes over a period of time and take remedial action before getting a nasty surprise at the end of the year.

Managing a company's cash flow isn't an abstract exercise for MBAs. This is where the owner-operator really takes a "hands-on" approach to running the business.

The Haliburton County Development Corporation was created to help business grow. Our manager, Andy Campbell, will be pleased to show you all the services available through the corporation. For more information call 457-3555 or visit our office on York St., Haliburton.

Strauss In the Doghouse makes music lovers tipsy

by NANCY ROBICHAUD

Haliburton Music lovers enjoyed a unique experience Monday evening. The Brussels Double Bass Quartet included a performance with our Guild series in their 26 concert tour of Ontario and Quebec. They return to Belgium in April where they will resume orchestral chairs.

We didn't know what to expect. Double basses grumbling beneath more cheerful sounds of higher instruments seemed unlikely candidates for solo exposure. The program notes suggested we would be surprised at the great diversity of colour. We were.

The quartet played a varied program including contrapuntal German dances from the sixteenth century through Prokofiev's bassoon quartet with its exciting rhythmic outbursts to a Scott Joplin rag. This last number had plenty of spunk in the bass but lacked the traditional snappy piano treble.

The group did have a fine pianist with them. Eric Demesmaeker assured us during the reception that he really was a bass player not a pianist, but he managed the piano accompaniments very well. The piano in the Handel trio and Bottesini concerto provided a necessary instrumental variety.

The most beautiful moments in the program came from composers who wrote especially for the double bass. Bernhard Alt's "Suite Romantique", the first piece written for a double bass quartet, allowed a rich blending of tones. The adagio movement was very lyrical indeed. A composition by Jacques Vanherenthais, the charming spokesperson for the group, gave us a Spanish flavoured rondo with surprising glissandi effects.

Especially exciting were two compositions by Bottesini, a nineteenth century Italian who composed for his instrument, the double bass. The "Capriccio di Bravoura" demonstrated Cristian Vander Borgh's high level of skill. He had to overcome the inconvenience of a broken foot (which he sheepishly admits he got playing football), to make the tour. The piece has a lovely singing line with some incredibly intricate passages testing the upper range of the instrument. For the second Bottesini piece Eric on piano accompanied as Jacques and Christian performed double concerto. Rich tones sang through here. One very pretty section had one bass accompany the other in arpeggios that sounded almost harplike.

The quartet, that featured Marc Henne as the bass of the double basses, obviously enjoyed playing together. They shared their relaxed approach in music of a lighter vein. Their "America Basses" had a very witty version of "Camptown Races" while "Strauss in the Doghouse" gave a rendition of "The Blue Danube" that made us all think we'd had too much champagne.

We'll probably never hear the like again, but we're glad to have had this musical experience. The Brussels Double Bass Quartet made a fascinating close to an exceptionally fine season of concerts.

March Break provides respite from any nasty winter blahs

DORSET NEWS

by Phyllis Briscoe

Intended for last week

"Sunshine is delicious, rain is refreshing, snow is exhilarating, wind is braving. There is no such thing as bad weather, only different kinds of weather. Right?"

We have some overdue birthday wishes: Ted Morris celebrated on the 1st; Shannon Nixon was 9 on the 3rd; Mel Bartman celebrated on the 9th. Many happy returns to all.

St. Patrick's Day is upon us. The day when everyone kicks up their heels, those who are Irish and those who wish they were. In the cities there will be parades and lots of hoopla come rain or shine. A chance to have a celebration with lots of fun and games. I'm sure there are plenty of private parties planned. The volunteers have been working like beavers to finish the Recreation Centre by the 17th but I have not heard that it will be ready for festivities at that time. It's going to be a great facility for the community when ready for use.

The final count on funds raised by the Dorset School effort, Jump Rope For Heart was $1,838. The children and organizers are to be congratulated.

The Dorset Senior Club had a good turnout for games day last Wednesday. We were pleased to have Ron and Mary Howard with us. The Howards moved to Bracebridge several years ago but continue to attend the club when possible and are always welcomed with open arms. A welcome guest who visits the club periodically was Ellen Booker, who is always a nice addition to the group. Remember that next Wednesday, March 22, the Dwight Lakeview Seniors will be guests at the club.

The holiday week known as March Break is being passed in many ways. Some families taking off for a short jaunt to a warmer clime, in spite of strikes on airlines, others going to visit relatives, who are not distant, but not visited too frequently. Some just stay home and take advantage of the children's free time to go on shopping sprees or a days outing to ski or otherwise enjoy nature. Whatever occupies each family's time during the week, it is a great respite from the blahs and they are ready to be patient and wait for the crocus and daffodils to come popping through the ground.

Local cadets earn 'top gun' marks

Three local cadets have earned their top-level qualifications.

Christopher Allaire, George Simmons and Callum Wood of the 1129 Royal Canadian Army Cadets, Haliburton Corps, spent last Saturday in Belleville where they took part in a day-long test.

After passing the written test of Phase I in February, the boys had to pass all three levels of Saturday's Phase II: drill lessons, teaching a class and an outdoor outing to test their knowledge of using maps and compasses.

Successful in their attempts, the three cadets now have their top-level cadet qualifications for instructors positions.

Walk to get grant

Haliburton's Heritage Walk will once again get funding help from the municipality. On Monday, council approved a grant of $300 for the third annual walk, which will take place on the July 1 holiday weekend.

In a letter to council, organizer Leopoldina Dobrensky said the walk is one of only two in Ontario, and is the only one in which local citizens dress in period costumes to portray historic figures.

The walk attracts scores of participants, and has become an important tourist attraction for the community.

Minden W.I.

The Roll Call at the March 15 meeting of Minden Women's Institute was answered by 16 members. They had a bit of "The Irish" as they named places in Ontario of Irish origin or paid a fine. Mrs. W. Moore reported sending 22 cards since the last meeting. After this she gave a full yearly report of 217 cards sent during the past year for weddings, anniversaries, get-wells, birthdays, baby cards or in sympathy. All then joined in their appreciation. Pennies for Friendship and collection for the Card fund were taken and some members added money to the birthday box. The bus trip is planned for June 14 to Kingston and Annie Kernohan is in charge.

Mrs. D. Berry, convener, then gave a paper on the history of soap, it's origins and she showed samples during processing of a cake of hand soap. Various comments and a discussion were made by the members, as some had made hand soap during the last war. There were some amusing readings by Mrs. Sears and Mrs. Coulter. After the adjournment all enjoyed a snack and a cup of tea. The next meeting is April 19 at 2 with speaker health nurse Margaret Graham.

IN MEMORIAM

ERN & DELLA GRIFFIN—
Dear Mom & Dad:
You had a smile for everyone
Your hearts were made of gold.
You left me a precious memory
This world has ever known.
To me you both were special
What more can I say
Except with all my heart
I wish you both were here today.
Always loved and remembered, Lottie & Family.

32-P-22

VERNA PRIEST—In loving memory of a dear grandmother, who passed away
March 21, 1987.
If all the world were ours to give
We'd give it—yes and more,
To see your loving smile
again,
And greet you at our door.
How oft there comes before us,
Your dear face, kind and true;
For death can never take away,
Our memories of you.
Sadly missed and always remembered by Darlene and Harold.

32-P-22

RIEL—In loving memory of Jackie who left us suddenly on March 20, 1970.
He had a nature you could not help loving.
And a heart that was purer
than gold.
And to us who loved him and miss him.
His memory will never grow old.
Always remembered by Mom & Dad, brothers and their families.

32-P-22

REDNER—In loving memory of our parents, Earl and Merle, who went to be with the Lord March 24, 1987.
A special smile, a special face
A part of our family we cannot replace
To have, to love and to part is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.
As time unfolds another year
Our hearts are deeply saddened
But once again we remember that day
Of how suddenly it all happened.
We still have days of sadness
And our silent tears still flow
Still deep the pain of losing you Though you died two years ago
But, you haven't really left us
Nor have you travelled far
Just entered God's beautiful garden.
And left the door ajar.
Ever remembered, ever loved by Val, Glenda, Joan, Bernice, and Families.

IN MEMORIAM

VERNA PRIEST—In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother who passed away March 21, 1987.
We think of you in silence
We often speak your name
We feel again the bitter blow
That never should have come
Our hearts still ache in silence
Secret tears still flow
For what it meant to lose you
Mom
Those who truly loved you know
Our thoughts are always with you
Your place no one can fill
In life we loved you dearly
In death we love you still
Our family chain is broken
now
And nothing seems the same
But as God calls us one by one
The chain will link again,
Sadly missed and always remembered by daughter
Elaine, son-in-law Rendal,
and grandchildren Grant,
Glenda, Valerie, Darlene and Harold.

VERNA PRIEST—In loving memory of my dear wife who passed away March 21, 1987.
We made our vows together
And said, till death do part
So when God came and took your hand
My whole life fell apart.
No one knows the heartache
I try so hard to hide
No one knows how many times
I've broken down and cried
When I look back upon our lives
Just one thing makes me glad
That you chose me to share with you
Those precious years we had.
Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by husband,
Gordon.

WARBURTON, JOSEPH: In
loving memory of our dear
Father and Grandfather who passed away March 14, 1988.
Though your smile is gone forever
And your hand we cannot touch
Still we have so many memories
Of the one we loved so much
Your memory is our keepsake
With which we'll never part
God has you in his keeping
We have you in our hearts.
Always remembered and loved
by Randy, Maureen,
Diane, Darren, Daureena &
Dionna.
